FAMINE FOLLOWS FLOOD

2 KILLED BY CRASH OF TANK

Two workmen were killed and one other was hurt when a water tank fell through the roof of the chemical factory of Henry Thayer & Company on Broadway, Cambridgeport, this noon.

DEAD.

HALL, FRED A., of Cambridge, ironworker, crushed under the tank.

HILL, PERLEY of Somerville, ironworker, crushed under the tank.

INJURED.

McINTOSH, GEORGE, of Malden, ironworker, jammed under the tank and nearly drowned in the rush of water.

The tank fell at 12:55, just as the 200 men and women employes of the Thayer company were returning to afternoon work. When the crash came all fled panic-stricken from the building. Naturally, they thought the whole structure was falling. All employes got out safely.

Someone pulled in a fire alarm, which proved a wise thing because Captain "Jack" Gaddis and his axe men of Ladder 2, who were first on the scene, chopped the drowning and injured McIntosh out from under the water tank in time to prevent him from being injured more, if not killed.

The tank which fell was a 1,000-gallon receptacle, one of several on the roof of the Thayer factory. They are reservoirs for the factory sprinkler system.

This one, located to the left centre of the roof, was raised ten feet up on iron legs. A gang of men from the H. F. Shaw ironworks were repairing the iron supports.

Without warning the iron legs buckled, the tank, with its water weight, tipped swiftly to one side, then dropped abruptly to the roof. The wood, iron and water mass crashed through the roof to the fourth floor of the factory. A hole twenty feet square in the roof showed where it went through.

All the ironworkers were under the tank when it started to fall. Hill, Hall and McIntosh were caught in the drop. The others jumped just in time.

The top floor of the factory is used for boiling caemicals. The comparatively small number of employes working on that floor were just entering from noon hour when the tank fell.

The firemen, who were on board about as soon as the first factory employes ran back upstairs, heard groans. They chopped timbers away and released McIntosh, who was drenched and badly bruised.

Then the bodies of Hall and Hill were taken out. They had been crushed by the tank timbers.

IS THE TELEPHONE COMMON CARRIER?

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The question as to whether telephone companies operating across State lines are common carriers and as such obliged to accept connections with other companies or with individual telephone owners is to be presented to the Interstate Commerce Commission next Thursday. The issue originates in a demand by the military authorities upon a Washington telephone company to afford an outlet to the city over its cables to the telephone exchange system at Fort Myer.

BOSTON'S WATER SUPPLY POLLUTED?

WEST BOYLSTON, March 28.—Selectman E. B. Brigham declares that sewage is being allowed to pollute the Wachusett basin, which supplies a portion of the drinking water for Boston.

A REMARKABLE TORNADO PICTURE—The body of Frank Jameson of Chicago is lying in the branches of a tree in Bemis Park, Omaha, where it was carried and dropped by the tempest.

MELLEN STREET CAR CONTRACTS ARE DEMANDED

In a discussion today in the Federal building at the hearing before Commissioner Prouty of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the finances and service of the New Haven road, Robert Homans, appearing for the Boston Chamber of Commerce, asked that the contracts made by the New Haven road for the construction of electric railways in the western part of the State be submitted for inspection.

Homans said that he thought the public should know whether the New Haven road had been using its funds in extravagant ventures not directly connected with the railway business when freight service of New England was suffering.

WIDOW PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO EATON MURDER

Mrs. Jennie M. Eaton pleaded not guilty to the charge of murder in the first degree when arraigned at Plymouth under the indictment returned yesterday by the Plymouth County Grand Jury.

She was held by Judge Dubuque without bail.

Her attorneys were not allowed the privilege of waiving the reading of the warrant indictment, and for seven minutes Mrs. Eaton stood in the prisoner's cage without outward show of emotion, while

4,000 DEAD IN SEVEN STATES; 200,000 PERSONS STARVING; HALF A MILLION HOMELESS; PROPERTY LOSS $200,000,000

FLOODS, IN SOME INSTANCES ACCOMPANIED BY FIRE, FAMINE AND PESTILENCE, TODAY ARE SPREADING DESOLATION OVER PARTS OF SEVEN STATES.

A DISASTROUS FLOOD IS SWEEPING DOWN THE OHIO VALLEY, AND PARTS OF WHEELING, W. VA., PARKERSBURG, W. VA.; MARIETTA, O.; CINCINNATI, O.; LOUISVILLE, KY.; EVANSVILLE, IND., AND OTHER CITIES ALONG THE VALLEY ARE INUNDATED.

THE TOTAL NUMBER OF DEAD THROUGHOUT THE GREAT FLOOD ZONE MAY GO OVER 4,000.

THE AGGREGATE FINANCIAL LOSS WILL RUN ABOVE $200,000,000.

HALF A MILLION PERSONS ARE HOMELESS.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND ARE WITHOUT FOOD.

TEN THOUSAND PERSONS IN THE OHIO FLOOD DISTRICT ARE MISSING.

ZANESVILLE, O., ON THE MUSKINGUM RIVER, IS HALF UNDER WATER AND IS BEING SWEPT BY FIRE. THE MONETARY LOSS IN ZANESVILLE IS $8,000,000.

The situation in Dayton is slightly improved, but the city is virtually wrecked by fire and flood, and the thousands of homeless there are suffering intensely from the cold weather and lack of food.

Festilence is following in the wake of the floods in Indiana.

Parts of Ohio and Indiana are under martial law. Secretary of War Garrison and General Leonard Wood, U. S. A., will arrive in Columbus tomorrow and take charge of the relief work.

Flood records are being established in New York State. Scores of cities through the Mohawk and Hudson valleys are inundated. The lower sections of Albany, Hor nell, Troy, Watervliet, Corning, Lyons, Lansingburgh, Rochester, Amsterdam and Waterford, as well as many other New York towns, are flooded.

A cold wave accompanied by snow has swept over the flood districts of Ohio and New York. The rivers of western Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia are in flood. The streams of western Kentucky are becoming torrents.

Relief trains are being rushed into the flood zones. Every agency of federal aid is being utilized. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars was raised in twenty-four hours in New York. Boston has contributed $68,000 to date. Millions of dollars will be raised throughout the nation.

ALLIES MARCH ON TURK CAPITAL

LONDON, March 28.—A Central News dispatch from Sofia states that the Bulgarians have broken through the Turkish defences at Tchataija and that the way into Constantinople lies open before them. Following the capture of the Turkish central Tchataija village, the Bulgars and Servians executed a flank movement against the Turkish left wing which is said to have been successful.

Bulgarian batteries were moved forward under darkness and the Turkish defenders were driven toward Constantinople at the point of the bayonet. The Bulgars pursued, killing hundreds of the Turks.

Bulgarian and Servian reinforcements are being rushed from Adrianople as fast as troop trains can carry them. It is believed in London that the leaders of the Balkan league plan to dictate terms to Turkey in the capital of the Ottoman empire.

The Bulgarians took 50,000 prisoners at Adrianople, including 1,220 officers, many of whom were foreigners.

The Bulgarian loss was placed at 5,000 killed and wounded. There were 35,000 Servians fighting with the Bulgarians. The loss was not reported.

Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria entered Adrianople in military state, accompanied by his two sons, General Savoff, the Bulgarian commander-in-chief, and General Ivanoff.

WIDOW, CHARGED WITH ADMIRAL'S DEATH, FACES COURT ORDEAL BRAVELY

Clerk Edward E. Hobart read the lengthy indictment.

Soon after the arraignment was over District Attorney Barker called the newspaper men together and said:

"The mental condition of Mrs. Eaton will be very carefully examined."

The District Attorney would add nothing to the statement.

If the government is determined to try and secure a lunacy commission to examine Mrs. Eaton, William A. Morse and Francis A. Geogan, her attorneys, are as equally determined to fight such a course. Not only did they say that they would fight the appointment of a lunacy commission for their client to the last ditch, but they went into conference with the widow shortly after the arraignment.

Showed Signs of Nervousness.

When Mrs. Eaton was brought into court, her attorney, William A. Morse, fixed a seat for her in the dock, and took his position as near to her as the barred enclosure would permit.

During the reading of the document charging her with first degree murder, Mrs. Eaton shifted her feet but once. Once she cleared her throat. Her hands remained immovable at her side. At the conclusion of the reading she nervously reached up under her veil and brushed her cheeks.

In the courtroom representing the government were District Attorney Barker and his assistants, Messrs. Frederick A. Katsman and George Adams.

Mrs. Eaton was represented in the presence of her attorneys, William A. Morse and Francis Geogan.

When the clerk had finished his ancient formula to open the criminal session of the court, District Attorney Barker addressed Judge Dubuque, saying:

"An indictment was yesterday returned, charging Jennie M. Eaton with murder. The defendant is now at the bar."

Pleads "Not Guilty."

Judge Dubuque, addressing the clerk, said: "Mr. Clerk, the defendant may now be arraigned."

Clerk Hobart completed the reading of the indictment. Then, addressing the prisoner, he said clearly: "Jennie M. Eaton, to this indictment what say you, guilty or not guilty?"

Mrs. Eaton cleared her throat, and in a voice that sounded tense and forced answered:

"Not guilty."

Judge Dubuque announced that the motion made by the District Attorney to allow counsel for the defendant two weeks in which to file objections to the indictment was granted.

He also granted the District Attorney's motion to remand the defendant to jail without bail.

The criminal session was then declared closed, and Mrs. Eaton was escorted to the judge's room at the rear of the courtroom for a conference with her attorneys before being returned to the jail.

The accused woman had spent a restless night at the jail and came into court red-eyed, as if recently weeping. When she entered the court room through a side door she walked with a firm step, but kept her eyes fixed on the floor.

Mrs. Eaton arrived at the courthouse at 9:45 a. m., accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Earle Blake. It had been planned to convey her over the two miles from the jail to the court in one of the closed prison vans

Asked to See Lawyers.

Early today, however, she earnestly requested that she might be permitted to get to the court room in time to consult with her attorneys, William A. Morse of Boston and Frances J. Geogan of Rockland.

To this request District Attorney Barker gave his consent, and Deputy Sheriff Blake was sent to the jail at 8 o'clock.

The deputy sheriff had chartered a large touring car, the top of which was up and the sides down. At 9:30 Mrs. Eaton was ready to leave the jail.

She came outdoors to enter the car, displaying no signs of weakness in her step. She was heavily veiled and dressed in black. She entered the automobile and was driven around the outskirts of Plymouth and over the road to a side door of the courthouse not generally used.

She eluded the few curiosity seekers who had gathered in front of the courthouse in the hope of catching a glimpse of her as she entered. She was escorted into the county building and taken upstairs to a room usually assigned for the use of the judge.

At 10:30 her attorneys had arrived. The accused widow and her lawyers held a short consultation, after which she was placed in the prisoner's dock and arraigned.

KID CARTER'S FATE IS NOW IN HANDS OF JURY

The case of James Brandon Jennings, known in the prize fighting ring as "Young Kid Carter," who has been on trial since Monday before Judge Brown and a jury in the First Session of the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court for the murder of William H. McPherson, who was shot in a South End saloon on New Year's Day, was given into the hands of the jury at 11:30 today. The jury immediately retired for deliberation.

After Judge Brown had made his charge to the jury, Jennings was asked if he had anything to saw in his own behalf. He arose and said:

"Well, your honor, there is nothing to be said. My lawyers have said everything."

District Attorney Pelletier, who has been prosecuting Jennings for the government, began his closing argument at 9:30 and concluded at 10:30. A recess of ten minutes was then taken, after which Judge Brown charged the jury.

SAY 500,000 DIE OF CANCER YEARLY

NEW YORK, March 28.—Frederick L. Hoffman, statistician of the Prudential Insurance Company, declared at Newark that cancer claims 75,000 victims yearly in the United States and 500,000 in the civilized world. A nation-wide campaign for education in the indications of incipient cancers, or even non-malignant tumors, would aid materially, Mr. Hoffman said, in the efforts to reduce the mortality from this preventable disease.

NEW CHARGE AGAINST SNOW IN N. H. INQUIRY

CONCORD, N. H., March 28.—Phillip Faulkner, secretary of the Republican State Committee, today informed the special legislative committee inquiring into alleged bribery in connection with the election of several State senators and representatives in the last State election, that he heard Clifford B. Snow, Progressive, of Manchester, say that he (Snow) would deliver nine Democratic votes to elect Franklin Worcester, Republican candidate for Governor, when the latter came up for election in the Legislature.

"The offer," said Faulkner, "was made in my presence in the quarters of the Republican State Committee in Concord." He did not know whether anything was done about accepting Snow's offer.

Another witness was Elmer Tilton of Laconia, Republican candidate for councilor, who stated that Snow offered to help him if he (Tilton) "did the right thing."

NEWPORT CHURCH FILES SUIT ANSWER

NEWPORT, R. I., March 28.—Mrs. William R. Hunter, Mrs. Sarah Peckham and Mrs. Frances Conway, officers of the Women's Guild of St. Mary's Church of Portsmouth, R. I., today through Attorney Frank F. Nolan filed in the Superior Court a general denial of the charges in the suit brought against them by the Rev. Frederick W. Goodman. The latter is rector of St. Mary's Church and in a suit brought to obtain control of money in the possession of the defendants as officers of the guild, he charges misuse of funds collected for the church. The case will be heard on the first week in April.

BRYAN ESCAPED FLOOD; NOW SAFE AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Escaping the flooded district of Ohio because of the northerly route he took, Secretary Bryan reached here last night from his home at Lincoln, Neb. He had experienced no difficulties, nor had he seen any of the flood's ravages.

Mr. Bryan had been out of communication for twenty-four hours with the State Department, and some alarm had been felt. "When we came through Akron, O., I noticed that the river was high," said Mr. Bryan, "but the railroad bridge was safe, and we had no difficulties from the storm at any time."

WILKIE STARTS PROBE OF BOSTON SMUGGLING PLOT; MORE ARRESTS LIKELY

James E. Wilkie, supervising agent of the United States Treasury and former chief of the Secret Service Department, came to Boston today and began an investigation of the smuggling at the port. He conferred with Collector of the Port Edwin Curtis, and cross examined a number of the customs employees. It is said that further arrests will be made shortly following those of Mr. and Mrs. Terence L. Sheviln of Somerville and Miss Kate Brennan, a New York modiste.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo will personally direct the investigation of smuggling at the ports of Boston and New York, and may come to this city within a short time, according to customs officials. According to the government officials the United State shas been defrauded out of millions of dollars' duties which should have been paid on gowns smuggled into this country, the majority coming through this port.

Many Employes Questioned.

Chief Wilkie arrived in Boston early today and went to the office of Collector Curtis on the fourth floor of the custom house in Tremont street. Other customs officials were called in, and Carl Chandler, special agent in charge of the United States Treasury Department, was also present. The men conferred for some hours, no one being admitted except employes who were questioned as to conditions in the customs department.

At 1 o'clock when Chief Wilkie went to luncheon with Special Agent Chandler he was questioned by an AMERICAN reporter. He said: "You are here in connection with the smuggling case, Chief Wilkie?"

"I have nothing to say. We never make a practice of telling what we are here for until after we accomplish what we set out to do. I can't discuss the matter with you."

In an effort to locate thousands of dollars worth of valuable gowns and other property said to have been smuggled into the United States from Paris and other continental cities, Custom House officers today searched the shops and dressmakers and importers in the Back Bay.

The officers were at work following the arrests of Mrs. Annie W. Sheviln of Somerville, her husband, Terrence L. Sheviln of the Boston Custom House, and Miss Kate A. Brennan, a New York modiste.

It was stated at the Federal building, where Mrs. Sheviln was to be arraigned this afternoon, that the search for smuggled property in the Back Bay will undoubtedly result in several more arrests in the case. The government officials declared that they believe the United States has lost at least $5,000,000 in customs duties in the last few years. Boston is said to have been the centre of operations.

Suspect Sleeper System.

Government inspectors said today that in these latest smuggling frauds the "sleeper system" was used. It was one of the most simple systems of smuggling ever tried and it worked for any months. The valuable gowns and other property from Europe that were to be smuggled into the United States came over in sleeper trunks. Stickers that were identical to the official government stamps it is said were easily obtained. These stickers were placed on the trunks and thus the custom inspectors were deceived.

Following an exposure of the "sleeper system" today the Custom House Department today sent out a warning to all inspectors to keep a close watch on all incoming baggage, and in the future detect stickers other than the regular ones.

Not until Kate Brennan, president of the Misses C. Donovan & Co., milliners of New York, was arrested in Boston did news of the alleged conspiracy leak out.

Trace Eight-Year Trail.

Charging that smuggling may have been going on here in Boston for eight years, during which time Miss Brennan made many trips to Europe, the officials declare the records at this port fail to show where she ever paid any duty on dresses brought here on those trips.

Assistant District Attorney Garland sends the following statement and outline of the alleged smuggling scheme:

Miss Brennan came over on the steamer Carpathia of the Cunard Line as a first-class passenger and reached this port on March 17, and did not declare the trunk which the government alleges was her property, but she declared another. She carried some hand luggage with her.

Miss Brennan is alleged to have sailed under the name of Catherine Thomas, but the trunk with the dresses inside was marked M. E. Ellison. This trunk, as is the custom with first-class passengers, was removed from the Carpathia and placed under the letter E on the dock for identification by the owner as all trunks are on these ocean liners.

The government officials suspected that something was wrong and refused to deliver the trunk to an expressman who said he had been told by a man to get it and to deliver it to the South Station. It was discovered by one of the lesser inspectors on the wharf that the sticker tag on the trunk, which bears the name of the inspector who passes on the contents as well as a private customs mark, was not of the latest design, but of a series now out of date.

FIRST BUILDING OF NEW BOSTON COLLEGE OPEN

Today marked an epoch in the life of the senior class of Boston College when the members marched in a body from the present buildings on St. James street to the new administration-recitation building, the first of the new buildings of the new Boston College at University Heights at Newton.

The opening of this building was of a strictly informal nature. Next Fall there will be a formal opening.

The exercises at the formal dedication next Fall will include a joint celebration of the opening of the new buildings and the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Boston College.

Some time in May the corner-stone of the new building will be laid.

The administration-recitation building is now practically complete, nothing remaining to be done on the building itself but the finishing of the interior decorations, which is being carried on under the direction of Brother Schroen, S. J.

THREE BOUND OVER ON ROBBERY CHARGE

John Flaherty, John Barrett and Bartholomew Brennan, all South Boston young men, were arraigned today before Judge Fallon in the South Boston District Court, charged with robbing John Larraway, seventy-four, who conducts a small store at No. 72 A street. Probable cause was found and the young men were held in $500 each for the Superior Court.

Roger Hoar and Youngest Leader in Suffrage Romance

Roger Sherman Hoar, former State Senator and ardent advocate of woman suffrage, is to show his practical faith in the cause by marrying Miss Elva Stuart Pease, called "the youngest suffragist in Massachusetts." Their romance followed an introduction during one of Mr. Hoar's business trips to Edgartown.

The pretty young bride-to-be is the daughter of Benjamin W. Pease, a contractor and member of the Board of Selectmen of Edgartown. She is a descendant of Governor Bradford, an ardent, though not militant, advocate of "votes for women."

Roger Sherman Hoar is the son of the late Congressman Sherman Hoar, who was an active figure in Boston's public life and United States District Attorney under Cleveland.

COLE IS AGAIN UP ON LOTTERY CHARGE

George A. Cole, the alleged lottery swindler, was placed on trial today before Judge Morton and the jury of the United States District Court.

The Watch and Ward Society's representatives were in court with witnesses. Cole was indicted on a similar offence by the federal authorities several years ago in connection with the Louisiana lottery, but escaped punishment.

BRANDEIS TO TALK ON BOSTON SUNDAY

Louis D. Brandeis will address the Congregational ministers of Greater Boston in Pilgrim Hall, No. 14 Beacon street, next Monday, at 10:30 a. m. He has been asked to say something about the better observance of Sunday in Boston and the laws which should govern the regulation of traffic on that day.

MOVE TO OUST G. O. P. SHERIFFS IN MAINE HOUSE

AUGUSTA, Me., March 28.—The resolve in the House of Representatives to remove from office Lewis W. Moulton, Democratic Sheriff of Cumberland County, for alleged failure to enforce the liquor laws, was today amended in the House to include Sheriff Wilbert M. Emerson of Penobscot County and Sheriff John W. Ballou of Sagadahoc County. Both these last named officials are Republicans and Sheriff Ballou has served consecutively for thirty-two years.

The largest city in Cumberland county is Portland. Bangor is the largest city in Penobscot county and Bath is the largest place and only city in Sagadahoc county.

It is claimed by Democrats that the first resolve against Sheriff Moulton was a political move and that it was introduced at the instance of Governor Haines. The resolve came from the Senate to the House yesterday and was laid over for consideration today. Then the amendment was made to include the other two officials.

WHITE SLAVER IS GIVEN TEN YEARS

George E. Cascella of New York was today given ten years in State prison in the United States Court, for complicity in a white slave case, in which Elizabeth Sokolowski, a Polish girl, was the victim. Joseph Warner of Springfield received a similar sentence yesterday in connection with the same case.

JESSIE WILSON MAKES PLEA FOR HER ALMA MATER

BALTIMORE, March 28.—Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson made a strenuous plea for her alma mater at a meeting in the interests of an endowment fund for Goucher College. She read a letter from President Wilson.

"It would indeed be an evidence that our great educational public does not fully understand its own interests," wrote the President, "if an institution which has served with such faithfulness and such distinction in the cause of woman's education should be allowed to break up for lack of money."

Lynn Society Girl Walks Tightrope at Ormond Fete

Friends in Lynn learned with delight today of the honors carried off at Ormond Beach, Florida, by Miss Hope Currier in an outdoor benefit for the Price-Anderson Hospital.

Not only did the pretty girl from the North Shore do a tightrope act, but her riding of a spirited horse bareback evoked the plaudits of thousands.

Miss Currier, not yet twenty-three, is a favorite in the social life of Ormond during the Winter season. She is the daughter of the late Benjamin W. Currier of Lynn.

Important to All Women Readers of This Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer a great deal with pain in the back, bearing-down feelings, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and, maybe, despondent; it makes any one so.

But thousands of irritable, nervous, tired and broken-down women have restored their health and strength by the use of Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy.

Swamp-Root brings new life and activity to the kidneys, the cause of such troubles.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy will do for them. Every reader of this paper, who has not already tried it, may address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and receive sample bottle free by mail. You can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at all drug stores.

GREENWOOD FOR MELLEN-OWNED TROLLEY LINES

President Levi Greenwood of the Massachusetts Senate took exception to the report of the Boston Chamber of Commerce on the railroad situation in his speech at the annual banquet of the New England Railway Club and urged a complete transportation monopoly with adequate government regulation permitting the New Haven road to acquire trolleys in the western part of the State.

President Greenwood declared there is less distinction than ever between electric and steam railroads and as consolidation has the call he placed himself in favor of permitting the New Haven to take over certain trolley lines, which move the directors of the Chamber of Commerce decried unwise. He said:

Western Massachusetts needs trolley lines. A great Massachusetts corporation stands ready to supply them if the State will but give its permission. I do not believe it is our duty to stand in the way.

I feel that the government can better control one well-organized monopoly in the interest of the public than it can a number of concerns engaged in ruinous and cut-throat competition. I feel confident that whether we have monopoly or competition, there will remain in the sovereign people enough courage and power to cope with any private interests and regulate them for the public.

CASSIDY DENOUNCES FOOD DOPERS; EXPLAINS PURE FOOD CRUSADE

Harry P. Cassidy, invited to address the Boston Sales Managers' Club at the City Club yesterday, denounced those food dopers, and the agents of the dopers, who have circulated false and slanderous attacks upon himself and upon the AMERICAN.

Edward F. Cullen of the Johnson Educator Food Company presided, and representatives of the Ward-Cathy Company, the A. H. Hill Company, H. P. Hood & Sons, D. & L. Slade Company, the Campbell Soup Company, the New England Maple Syrup Company, the H. A. Johnson Company, the Potter Confectionery Company, the Boston Transeript, the Fleischmann Yeast Company, Armour & Co., Swift & Co., the Molasses Company and many business firms were present. There were about fifty sales managers at the luncheon, representing every variety of business.

Mr. Cassidy spoke for over an hour, and following that for another hour answered questions asked by those who had listened to his speech. He illustrated his remarks by

In the face of the campaign of insinuation which has been carried on in the business district and at the State House, in an effort to defeat the pure food bills bearing Mr. Cassidy's name, this gathering of representative business men, ready to applaud Mr. Cassidy's position on food topics, is one of the hopeful signs of the day. It promises the approach of the time when every food manufacturer who makes a pretense of respectability, will refuse to manufacture or sell debased, doped or poisonous products.

Mr. Cassidy spoke in part as follows:

I'm pleased to have this opportunity to speak to you gentlemen and to meet you personally.

Reports have come to me, and you all will realize that these reports are true, that the enemies of the pure food bills before the House of Representatives and the Senate, have circulated attacks upon me and upon the AMERICAN, in an effort to defeat those bills.

Stands on His Record.

I shouldn't be surprised if some of you came here today expecting to see a pretty rough customer, or imagining that you might be held up and robbed before you got away.

I want to disillusionize you. I'm ready to answer any questions you may care to ask me, as to my own record or my doings; I am prepared to face the most rigorous cross-examination from you, and I will welcome the opportunity to dissipate any doubts you may have as to my sincerity or honesty.

The Boston AMERICAN brought me here, and chief understanding with me was something like this:

I was to work just exactly as I did in Philadelphia—purchase samples of food, have these samples analyzed and look for violations of the law. My findings were to be published in the AMERICAN, and I was to be unrestricted by the influence of advertisers in the paper, or by any other "interests."

That agreement has been carried out. I have never been asked to alter or modify a story in any way, and I have been given a free hand to print the facts as I found them. Had there been any attempt to check me I should not be here today.

I want to say to you gentlemen, my position as a food agent gave me great power to punish offenders against the law, but I believe that with the newspaper behind me, I can do a great deal more for food purity than I could as an officer of the law.

The food doper who is making $20,000 a year by his dishonest methods doesn't mind paying a fine of $10 or $25 or $50 a year for fraud so long as that fact doesn't get into the paper.

Discusses Rotten Eggs.

The Boston Post, in an editorial, suggested that if food dopers were required, after conviction in any court, to post a notice in their shop windows for a certain number of days to the effect that they had been convicted, the food doping business would decline in popularity.

The idea is a good one, though such a law, of course, is not practicable. It is publicity the food doper fears, not arrest.

Mr. Cassidy told in brief of his work in Philadelphia—now years of work as an inspector trained him for the position of food agent, and he described some of his combats with food swindlers in Philadelphia.

He told how he had arrested men for selling rotten eggs—just as rotten eggs are being sold today in Boston—for use by bakers in food. He told how a women's club declared they did not believe cake could be made from rotten eggs. He told how he persuaded two women of the club to make the trial, and how he secured for them some rotten eggs, rancid butter and worm-eaten flour. He told how one of the women fainted at the stench, but how the finished product so far as looks, smell and taste went, was equal to a pound cake made of good materials.

He showed his listeners a sample slice of this cake, which he kept in a glass jar. He added:

Professor Sedgwick says the question of rotten eggs is not a health question. I ask you if, knowing this cake was made of rotten eggs, rancid butter and worm-eaten flour, you would be willing to eat it, or feel it to your children; no matter what opinion Professor Sedgwick may present?

Publicity Brought Law.

He urged that the rotten egg dealers of Boston should be punished by law, and said:

In my first rotten egg cases in Philadelphia the attorneys for the other side came to me. They said: "Where's your law on this? What are you prosecuting under? You have no law that forbids the sale of these eggs."

I said: "All right; let's try the case."

We tried the case. The judge said the case did not come under the law. But the publicity given that case was so widespread that one of the first things the next Legislature did was to PASS A LAW PROVIDING FOR A FINE OF $200 OR MORE, AND FOR IMPRISONMENT, FOR THE SALE OF THOSE ROTTEN EGGS IN THE FUTURE.

I believe with the evidence I have gathered and presented to the District Attorney convictions can be secured against these rotten egg dealers in Boston. Remember, I have had nine years' experience in preparing food cases, and know something of the value of evidence and of how to prepare it.

But even if there were no law definitely applicable to the sale of rotten eggs, I BELIEVE THE SELLERS OF ROTTEN EGGS SHOULD BE HALED INTO COURT, AND THE FACTS AS TO THEIR FILTHY TRAFFIC PRESENTED IN LEGAL FORM, SO THAT THERE WOULD BE NO DOUBT THAT THIS CONDITION DOES EXIST IN BOSTON.

PHONE GIRLS IN SESSION TODAY; TALK OF STRIKE

Twenty-two hundred Boston telephone girls are talking strike. Several meetings to discuss the situation will be held today. Telegrams have been sent to the international officers, asking their immediate presence in Boston.

The union's recent requests to the company have been ordered returned without further consideration by President P. L. Spalding of the company. He declared that the telephone concern must deal with its employes only as employes. He said he believed the present conditions of work and wages fair and reasonable, adding that the company is facing all the expenditures it can assume. President Spalding declares:

Spalding Opposes Increase.

In order to safeguard individual rights and freedom the position of any employe does not depend on any question of religious belief, racial lines or membership in any organization, but is dependent only on the individual fitness and ability of the employe for the particular kind of work. The company, therefore, must deal with its employes only as employes.

All complaints must be taken up by the employes with their superior officers with the right of appeal to those next in authority. It is the intent of the company to treat its employes fairly, and every effort will be made to see that all injustice is avoided.

Within the last eight months the company has, among other things, shortened the hours and raised the wages of the operators at an increased cost of more than $300,000 per annum, and on January 1 it put into effect the benefit plan for all employes at an annual cost of $125,000. Personally I am distinctly of the impression that the present conditions of work and wages are fair and reasonable.

Every Member Notified.

Meetings will be held today at the Women's Trade Union League, No. 7 Warrenton street and in Wells Memorial building. Every member has been notified to attend one or the other of the sessions.

While the union's officers would make no declarations except of hope for a satisfactory adjustment of all matters, individual members and groups of members openly talked of strike.

Ships Bring Record Day's Sugar Cargo, 13,123,000 Pounds

Three steamers arrived in port today, bringing cargoes of sugar that aggregate 13,123,000 pounds, the largest shipments of sugar ever received in this port in a single day.

The vessels were the Norwegian tramp steamer Vitalia, bringing 2,310,000 pounds; the British tramp Kaffos, with a cargo of 3,310,000 pounds, both from San Dominican ports, and the big British tramp Whitefield, with 7,680,000 pounds, from Cuban ports.

On board the Vitalia were Chief Officer Julius Langfeldt, four other officers and five men of the crew of the Norwegian tramp Andvil, which went on a coral reef and was wrecked off the coast of Hayti on February 28. The other officers and men of the crew were brought into New York from the West Indies in another steamer.

Curley Will Seek Mayoralty Only if Fitzgerald Doesn't

"If Mayor Fitzgerald will be a candidate for re-election to the office of Mayor, I will not enter the race," was the declaration of Congressman James M. Curley, speaking before the Bridgetenders' Union.

"The Mayor," he said, "has done a good deal for the city employes during the last few years. Of course, a Mayor can't do everything he desires or what he has promised, but he has done his best, and I will never oppose him.

"There is one sure thing, believe me, if Mayor Fitzgerald will only admit that he will not be a candidate, I will join just as soon as he will make that statement public in the red-hot mayoralty fight and will fight all the other candidates who will oppose me."

ROXBURY CITIZENS IN BIG MASS MEETING PROTEST CAR SERVICE

Likening that part of Tremont street between Lenox street and Roxbury Crossing to a graveyard, Representative F. Joseph McManus of Ward 19, in a spirited address to 300 citizens in the Roxbury Courthouse, declared that such a condition of affairs is due to "the thin skinned politicians of the district who are afraid to come out in the open and demand that the Elevated road populate the place with cars." He said that there are men who are always willing to accept an office but are afraid to go out afterwards and "plug for the masses."

The meeting was called to enter a protest to the Railroad Commissioners against the inadequate car service between Roxbury Crossing and Lenox street on Tremont streets. The business men of Tremont street were out in force and a number of them gave their opinions of the Elevated officials in neglecting to care for the people of the community by diverting cars formerly run down Tremont street from the Roxbury Crossing end to the city.

Representative Magrath's Ideas.

Representative Edward Emmet McGrath presided and introduced as chairman Thomas Sprowles, a Tremont street business man.

Mr. McGrath said in part:

Tremont street is one of the finest and widest streets in the city without a subway or Elevated. But real estate has depreciated, business has suffered and the traveling public in general has not been sufficiently served because the Boston Elevated Railway Company controls the right to regulate their system of transportation.

I have evidence to prove that when our streets were undergoing repairs the business men of my ward came together and had to subscribe $50 to have the cars continue from Lenox street to Roxbury Crossing, and then the cars were marked Lenox street, coming out of town.

Pleads for Workingman.

Admirably situated as we are at Roxbury Crossing with cars coming and going to and from Tremont street, Columbus avenue, Jamaica Plain, Brookline, Forest Hills, Franklin Field and other outlying points, no reason exists why Lenox street car loops should be permitted to be used as a terminal.

Numerous industries have been built in our district or are now in process of completion. We have one of the largest rubber manufacturing industries in the world, employing hundreds of people. We have a very large carpet factory, one of the largest and best this side of Philadelphia.

We have one of the largest shoe factories in the world, we have a large cigar factory just completed and another large shoe factory in process of completion at Roxbury Crossing.

There are millions of dollars invested in breweries. Some of the greatest in the world, employing thousands of workingmen, and these men and interests have asked me to assist them in procuring better car service.

"Have to Grin and Bear It."

And the Elevated Railway Company tells us we have to grin and bear it because it wants more dividends. And it says "it cost us two million dollars for the strike last year and we must economize and the only way we can do that is to coop the public all into the Elevated trains at Dudley street to the injury of other sections of our fair city and the traveling public."

Mr. Sprowles referred to the neglected condition of Roxbury Crossing and of the falling off in business because of the diversion of cars over Roxbury street to the Elevated structure on Dudley street.

Harry Hunt, of the firm of Hunt Brothers, dry goods merchants, in Roxbury Crossing, said the cars should not stop at Roxbury Crossing terminal, but should come and go from Brookline and Jamaica Plain, as in years past, with a transfer station at Roxbury Crossing.

Business Man's Plea.

William F. Sawyer, who conducts a drug store at No. 1152 Tremont street, was the next speaker. He is a former member of the Massachusetts Board of Pharmacy. He left a marked impression on the audience when he preferred charges against the Elevated road for exacting $50 from him and other business men for the purpose of paying for a temporary switch near Whittier street on Tremont street, and which served for the extension of the Lenox street car service to Ruggles street in November, 1908.

Mr. Sawyer declared injury has been done to every business man on Tremont street because of the absence of cars. He touched on the fact that the city of Boston had to pay a switchman to tend the switch paid for by the business men. He declared that it was the duty of the railroad to help to improve conditions.

Tells of Car Diversion.

Mr. Sawyer commented on the policy of the Elevated in diverting cars from Tremont street to other streets. He said:

Some time after the switch was laid Mr. Gray and I called President Bancroft on the telephone and told him that the signs on the cars still read Lenox street. Mr. Gray asked him to change them and if it was necessary to pay for them the business men of the district would do so just as they did on the switch matter. This angered Mr. Bancroft, evidently, and we thought he had forgotten about the signs. But sure enough we were surprised to see them placed on the cars several days later.

Here Mr. Sawyer showed how the car service made good business in the old days.

AMERICAN OPENS FLOOD RELIEF WORK STATIONS

Again the people of Boston and New England are called upon to give relief to the suffering—and to give it QUICKLY.

The Boston AMERICAN has opened a Flood Relief Bureau at No. 5 Winthrop square.

It has also opened Relief Bureaus at Dayton, O., and other points in the burned and flooded territory.

Supplies collected at the Boston bureau at No. 5 Winthrop square will be forwarded to the AMERICAN bureaus or Field Branches in the devastated territory.

The express companies and railroads are co-operating to rush aid to the needed sufferers in the Ohio valley.

The Adams, American, National, Southern and Wells-Fargo express companies have issued general orders to their agents in New England to carry free of charge to local relief bureaus all contributions of money, food and clothing for the people in the flood zone.

This means that contributions can be expressed free to the Boston AMERICAN Relief Bureau at No. 5 Winthrop square.

The railroads are transporting relief supplies free. The New Haven and Boston & Albany lines have notified Governor Foss to that effect.

So there will be no trouble getting the supplies out there, once they can be assembled.

All that remains is for the warm-hearted public of Boston and New England to make its contributions.

This public has given nobly in the past. It contributed thousands of dollars to the Italian earthquake sufferers. It gave money and supplies to the San Francisco sufferers and to the victims of other national disasters.

The smoke was still rising from the Chelsea fire ruins when supplies were being distributed from a Boston AMERICAN relief station.

There is an old and popular line which beginners at typewriting practice. It runs: "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party." This sentence contains nearly every letter of the alphabet.

But this sentence should now be written to read thus:

"NOW IS THE TIME FOR ALL TO COME TO THE AID OF THE FLOOD SUFFERERS."

Remember, as given twice, what gives quickly. The Boston AMERICAN has its Relief Bureau ready to receive contributions at No. 5 Winthrop square and its field bureaus ready to distribute supplies in the flood district.

Every person in Boston willing to contribute relief of any kind—food, medicine, clothing, shoes or other useful articles, is invited to prepare all such donations for delivery and to send or bring them to No. 5 Winthrop square.

The AMERICAN places itself at the disposal of the public officials of the stricken district and of the merchants of Boston for this relief work.

The moment supplies are received they are rushed to the Field Branches of the Relief Bureau, to be given out where most needed.

If you give clothing, give only new articles. There are great difficulties attendant upon handling old clothing.

Above all—don't wait a week to think it over. If you are going to give anything, give it NOW.

COLUMBUS, THE CAPITAL OF OHIO—This picture shows the finest business district, which was swept by flood, with terrible loss of life. It is estimated now that 1,000 persons may have perished as the waters rushed through the city.

BENEFIT SHOW TO AID FLOOD VICTIMS

A benefit performance to aid the flood sufferers of the West will be given Wednesday night in Tremont Temple under the management of Edwin W. Hesser. At the benefit will be shown Kinemacolor moving pictures of the Panama Canal and the war in the Balkans. Other performers and numbers on the benefit program will be announced in tomorrow's and Sunday's AMERICAN. The entire receipts of the performance will be turned over to the AMERICAN'S bureau for the flood sufferers.

Gains New Complexion By Peeling Her Skin

(Julia Orf in The Queen.)

"Keep still, sad heart, and cease repining, behind the clouds is the sun still shining." I was forcibly reminded of those lines when, after months of fretting over my ugly complexion, I found how easy it was to remove the ghostly, muddy skin and bring forth a bright, new complexion. I got an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax at my druggist's and used this like cold cream every night for two weeks, washing it off mornings. Lo and behold! That old skin had all peeled off! The healthy young skin underneath gave me a complexion as pure, white and soft as any young girl's. I experienced no discomfort, the skin came off so gradually and gently. Several friends having been similarly benefitted, I'm sure anyone whose skin is soiled, withered, blotchy, pimply or freckled, can acquire the loveliest complexion imaginable by using this remarkable treatment.

Another treatment that brought more sunshine was one to remove wrinkles. A fresh bath made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½-pt. witch hazel, soon erased away every line. It's wonderful.—Advertisement.

CHILDREN HATE CASTOR OIL, UGH!

Delicious "Syrup of Figs" Best for Their Little Stomachs, Liver and Waste-Clogged Bowels.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the physic that mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. The day of harsh physic is over. We don't force the liver and 30 feet of bowels how we coax them. We have no dreaded after effects. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their little stomachs and tender bowels are injured by them.

If your child is fretful, peevish, half sick, stomach sour, breath feverish and its little system full of cold; has diarrhoea, sore throat, stomach-ache; doesn't eat or rest well—remember—look at the tongue; if coated, give a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs, then don't worry, because you surely will have a well, smiling child in a few hours.

Syrup of Figs, being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics simply cannot be harmful. It sweetens the stomach, unless the liver is active and thoroughly cleanses the little one's waste-clogged bowels. In a few hours all your bile, undigested, fermenting food and constipated waste matter gently moves on and out of the system without griping or nausea.

Directions for children of all ages, also for grown-ups, plainly printed on the package.

By all means get the genuine. Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. Accept nothing else.

AMERICAN OPENS BUREAUS TO HELP FLOOD SUFFERERS

The Boston AMERICAN is opening Relief Bureaus here and in Dayton and the stricken area.

Every person in Boston willing to contribute relief of any kind—food, medicine, clothing, shoes or other useful articles, is invited to prepare all such donations for delivery.

In this respect the AMERICAN places itself at the disposal of the public officials of the stricken district and the merchants of Boston.

As quickly as supplies are contributed they will be rushed to the Field Branches of The Relief Bureau and dispensed among the needy. The AMERICAN desires only new articles of wearing apparel because of the great difficulties attendant upon the handling of old clothing.

Communicate with The Boston AMERICAN Relief Bureau, No. 5 Winthrop square.

Congressmen Meet Tonight to Raise Great Relief Fund

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Members of the House of Representatives will meet tonight to consider the flood situation and to make personal pledges to the relief fund. Every member of the House will be asked to contribute, but the amounts given by individuals will be kept secret. No names are to be given out in connection with the meeting or with the subscriptions. It is expected that the 425 Congressmen will all contribute and a big sum will thus be raised.

The call for the meeting today was the most novel feature of the relief work here. A great consignment of clothing and bedding will go tonight to Dayton and other towns on a relief train. The Red Cross has $100,000 in hand now for sending to Ohio and Indiana. More is coming in every hour.

The Scioto is falling rapidly and a surprising number of houses seem to have been washed away in West Columbus. Many people contend that the loss here will be 1,000. We are hoping this is excessive. Chillicothe reports the loss of more than 100 lives.

Piqua insists that the loss there is 500. The two great reservoirs, the Lewistown and the St. Mary's, have been kept intact, although it required a hard fight to save the Lewistown Reservoir. The country is making splendid response to the appeal for help.

President Wilson and his Secretaries of War and the Treasury are giving splendid assistance. We very much fear that points rendered inaccessible by the destruction of telephone lines will give us sad stories.

"MORE HELP NEEDED," SAYS COX, "FRISCO'S LOSS IS EXCEEDED"

COLUMBUS, O., March 28.—Governor James M. Cox issued the following statement summarizing flood conditions in Ohio:

It is the consensus of opinion that the property loss in Ohio will exceed that sustained by San Francisco, this apparently incredible statement is easily understood when the widespread destruction to railroad property is calculated.

It is safe to assume that more than half the large railroad bridges in Ohio are down. The waters are receding at Dayton, Piqua, Zanesville, Fremont, Tiffin, Chillicothe, Hamilton, Middletown and Columbus, and while the cold weather was welcome, because of the certain deterrent effect it would have on the rising tide, still the pinch of the cold adds to our difficulties, because untold thousands of people are homeless. Besides, the fall of the water will bring the real tragedy of the whole situation.

We ought to know soon approximately what the loss of life has been. The indications are that the disaster may not run as heavily as forecasted at Dayton, but there are grave fears that a tremendous tragedy will be revealed beyond the Scioto River, where the western part of Columbus is completely devastated.

Dayton is relieved in one respect. The 10,000 or 12,000 people penned up in the business buildings were freed.

In the main business section the water receded to about twelve inches, and with some difficulty traffic was resumed.

On the West Side 100 bodies were found on Williams street. The recession of the water revealed only two bodies in the business section.

Zanesville presented a problem making the nearest approach to the Dayton situation.

Fifteen thousand people were driven from their homes. What remains of the "Y" Bridge was twenty feet under water. Several structures across the river were swept away.

The water came up slowly and this made it possible for the people to escape.

Our great difficulty still remains the lack of railroad transportation.

RID BOSTON OF RATS, DEMANDS MEDICAL PAPER

"The rat is an indicator of unhygienic conditions. Get after the rats," is the warning issued by the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal.

The Journal points out that the rat is the most prolific of animals and declares that unless Boston is freed from rats, a year's time will suffice to give the animal command over the situation.

"Were it not for the law of the survival of the fittest," it continues, "and that other law of nature by which sentient things are constantly preying upon one another, the rat would within a few years, make the globe absolutely uninhabitable for man.

"The average litter is ten, and sometimes fourteen, and the rats begin to breed when they are four or five months old. A single pair in Boston, breeding without check or life losses, would soon have a progeny of 20,000,000 right here in one of our thoroughfares."

The Journal advises killing the animals by terriers, ferrets, barium carbonate and strychnine.

FRANK J. GOULD BECOMES EXILE FROM AMERICA

NEW YORK, March 28.—Frank J. Gould is on his way to Paris, and threatens to remain there, "disgusted with the United States Government."

Sailing with him were his wife and the three Misses Kelly, her sisters.

Among other grievances against things American, Mr. Gould pointed out that racing had practically been abolished here, while it flourished in France. In that country, he said, the government does as it can to aid business men and farmers.

PLAISTED MAY BE MONTREAL CONSUL

WASHINGTON, March 28.—That ex-Governor Frederick W. Plaisted of Maine is to be taken care of by the Wilson administration was shown today when he was mentioned for postmaster at Augusta or consul at Montreal.

Daly Is Ready to Report at Once for Army Service

Former Fire Commissioner Charles Dudley Daly, who has been given a recess appointment as first lieutenant in the army, is ready to report for duty. At his home in Brighton he said today that he will report as soon as he receives his commission. Mr. Daly said:

"The recess appointment by President Wilson becomes operative immediately. I believe. My commission will be sent to me and I will report for duty immediately. I do not know where I will be assigned. I may have to report at Washington for orders. I am ready to leave at once."

It is understood that the appointment was made at the suggestion of Major-General Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army. General Wood is anxious to have Mr. Daly back in the army as he believes he will make a good officer.

ALLEN BANDITS GRANTED STAY ON EXECUTION EVE

RICHMOND, Va., March 28.—Lieutenant-Governor Ellison has secured a postponement of the execution of Floyd Allen and Claude Swanson Allen until tomorrow afternoon.

The Attorney-General has agreed to furnish Lieutenant-Governor Ellison with a written opinion as his right to commute sentence by noon. The sentence of the court provides that the prisoners must be executed between sunrise and sunset today.

Governor Mann left the State for Trenton, N. J., after turning a deaf ear to friends of the Allens.

MILK PRODUCERS WOULD STAND CUT TO AID CONSUMER

If the price of milk is not going to be cheaper to the consumer, then the milk producers are willing to take thirty-two cents a can for their milk.

John Spaulding, director of the New England Milk Producers, asks:

If the price of milk is not reduced to eight cents a quart and the restaurant dealer gets a reduction, will the price of a glass of milk be reduced to four cents, or the size of the glass increased?

If there is going to be a reduction in the price of milk, why not give the consumer the benefit.

2,000 FILE OUT DURING BIG FIRE NEAR THEATRE

The more than 2,000 persons who attended last night's performances at the Boston Theatre were busy today discussing the success of the fire drill in which they took part when an $8,000 three-alarm fire in the building at Nos. 150 and 150A Tremont street, occupied on the first floor by Henry H. Tuttle & Co., a shoe concern sent thick smoke into the theatre.

The third act of the "Round Up," which includes the famous battle scene, had just been brought to a close and the house was filled with gunpowder smoke. Word was passed to the orchestra that there was a fire nearby, and the members, rising, played "The Star Spangled Banner." This was a signal for the audience to rise. Then Manager Levering stepped in front of the curtain.

"Please remain standing," he requested. "I don't want any of you to be frightened, but there is a fire on Tremont street and I want you to walk out quietly."

Ushers and other attaches were stationed at the aisles, but their services were not needed. The house was emptied in a few minutes.

WILL PROTEST TO NEW HAVEN DIRECT

PROVIDENCE, March 28.—When Charles A. Prouty of the Interstate Commerce Commission arrived here from Washington and announced he was ready to hear complaints against the service furnished by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, he could not find a single complainant. A complaint committee appointed by the Olneyville business men announced it would rather deal directly with the railroad than with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

ARREST ACTOR ON BAD CHECK CHARGE

Carl Johnson, an actor with a traveling theatrical company, has been taken in charge by the Boston police at the request of the Franklin, N. H., police. Johnson is charged with having passed worthless checks on H. N. Gibson, proprietor of the Franklin Hotel, and others. City Marshal Hale of the New Hampshire city came here today to take the man back with him for a hearing.

EPWORTH LEAGUE CONVENES APRIL 19

Miss Margaret A. Nichols, president of the Boston Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has made plans for the annual convention of the league at Watertown, Patriots' Day, April 19. Rev. W. T. Sheridan of Chicago will preach the sermon in the Methodist church of that town. Part of the time of the convention will be given over to visiting Lexington, Concord and Cambridge.

GOV. POTHIER WILL TEST CONSTITUTION

PROVIDENCE, March 28.—In signing the bill directing the clerks of the Assembly to certify to bills for payment of lady mileage to members of the Senate and House, Governor Pothier made a written statement to the Secretary of State that the "opinion" of the Supreme Court is not a "decision." The Governor wishes to test the constitutionality of the mileage measure.

ACCUSES JUDGE OF POLITICAL ACTIVITY

PROVIDENCE, March 28.—Making a bitter attack upon Judge Nathan M. Wright, Representative Troy of this city during a House debate declared that the judge occupies the position of a member of the bench while acting as an active head of a political organization. Troy opposed an item in the annual appropriation bill providing for Judge Wright's $2,500 annual salary.

Miss Perrin, of 'Soul Gown' Fame, Gets Big Fortune

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Miss Margaret Perrin, originator of the "soul gown," which was a sensation last Winter, has been awarded a fortune of $200,000 by the District of Columbia Supreme Court. A lump sum of $80,000 accumulated during her minority has been given to her outright.

Miss Perrin, daughter of Mrs. George Howard, is one of the popular girls of Washington. Among her friends she is known as "Peggy." Her hobby is gowns, as was evidenced when she appeared last year as a debutante wearing the marvelous creation of soft corn colored satin which typified the "Spring song." With her inheritance, society expects her to outdo previous sartorial efforts.

HURT IN FALL OVER SUBWAY STAIRS

Michael J. Kane of No. 53 Heath street, Roxbury, fell down the stairs of the Scollay square subway early today and received abrasions to the chin and other injuries. He was taken to the Relief Hospital.

FEDERAL DEMAND ON FRIEDMANN FOR HIS VACCINE

NEW YORK, March 28.—Government surgeons declare that, before the public health service can determine the efficiency of Dr. Friedmann's cure, it must have his vaccine and know the method of its preparation and administration.

Dr. Friedmann still withholds this information. To expedite the government's investigation, Surgeon-General Blue announced the appointment of Surgeon P. H. Lavinder of the public health service as a member of the committee of investigation.

The sixty patients now under treatment in New York are regarded by Dr. Blue as an insufficient number upon which to reach quick conclusions. He believes 200 or more should be inoculated. Dr. Lavinder, with Dr. A. M. Stimson, will observe the inoculated patients.

Faculty Questions Wellesley Girls on $5,000 Marriages

Every one of the 1,400 undergraduate girls of Wellesley College has had to answer, "on her honor" to the question of whether she belonged to a society which flaunts the motto "No husbands without $5,000 incomes."

Each one of them has solemnly asserted that there is no such club in existence to the best of her knowledge, and that no plans were being made to form such an organization. The investigation was made by the faculty, as an answer to rumors which have floated about the college recently.

Why Nobody Likes to Entertain England's King and Queen!

Royal visits eat up all the hosts' cash, turn "the stately home" inside out and make noble husbands and wives pretend to love one another.

NEW YORK RELIEF FUND CLIMBS ABOVE $100,000 MARK

NEW YORK, March 28.—With the establishment of many relief bureaus here, the funds for sufferers have already reached a large sum.

The local Red Cross announced that with the fund collected by Mayor Gaynor, amounting to $20,120, it had on hand for relief work more than $100,000.

A unique gift was tendered Mayor Gaynor by Theodore P. Shonts, president of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, who will donate 5 per cent. of the receipts from the sale of subway and elevated tickets next Monday. The average receipts on Monday are $110,000, which would give the fund $5,500.

Among the larger donors to the various funds today are:

Andrew Carnegie, J. Pierpont Morgan, Henry L. Dougherty & Co., and Philip, Dodge & Co., $10,000 each; the First National Bank, Mrs. Russell Sage, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Alexander Smith Cochrane, $5,000 each; United Cigar Stores Company, $3,000; J. & W. Seligman & Co., John Claflin, James Speyer & Sons, Brown Brothers, $2,500 each; Edward S. Harkness, $2,000; R. G. Dun & Co., and William A. Clark, $1,000 each.

RHODE ISLAND BISHOP TELLS OF THE HORRORS OF COLUMBUS FLOOD

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 28.—Bishop James DeWolf Perry of the Episcopal Church in Rhode Island, the first person to arrive here from the Ohio flooded district, described his experiences in the Yale News today. He went to Columbus to attend the consecration of Coadjutor Bishop Theodore I. Reese, and says that the troops were called out while the consecration services were in progress.

He and others watched some of the flood scenes from houetops and then took the first train East. On the way the train narrowly escaped being wrecked, just crossing a bridge before it collapsed, and the train East was a perilous one until the edge of the flood district was reached.

N. Y. CENTRAL HEAD REPORTS THAT TRAIN SERVICE IS BETTER

NEW YORK, March 28.—The following message was received at the office of President Brown of the New York Central lines today from J. J. Bernet, vice-president of the New York Central lines west of Buffalo:

TOLEDO, March 28.—Have established passenger service between Indianapolis and Chicago, via Anderson and Michigan division to Elkart, and Elkart and Chicago.

Also handling passengers from Indianapolis to the East, via Elkart now.

Expect to establish regular service between Indianapolis and Chicago tonight, via Lafayette and Kankakee.

Should have line open Cleveland to St. Louis some time Friday night or Saturday morning. Also from Cleveland to Columbus Friday night or Saturday morning.

The Lake Erie & Western line is operating from Sandusky to Lima, and a relief train has reached Peru, giving the sufferers relief with food and drinking water.

We have succeeded in moving a large amount of food and other supplies, with two regiments of Militia and two companies of Naval Reserves from Toledo today.

Fremont, Delaware and other towns provided with bread and other food supplies.

HUNDREDS SUFFER FROM PESTILENCE AFTER THE FLOOD

INDIANAPOLIS, March 28.—Pestilence and famine are in the wake of the floods in this State. An epidemic of smallpox and diphtheria is raging among the flood refugees at Peru. Typhoid fever from drinking filthy flood water is reported from parts of this city, Anderson, Fort Wayne and Lafayette. Hundreds of flood victims are sick from exposure, for cold weather prevails over the flooded sections.

The death list in Indiana was estimated today from 220 to 230, with many communities not heard from, and with the flood conditions swiftly getting worse in the Ohio Valley on the southern edge of the State.

The National Guard and thousands of organized volunteers are distributing food and clothing and medicines among the 80,000 homeless. Before normal conditions are restored $35,000,000 damage will have been done.

Trade stories come from Peru of crazed women leaping from rescue boats and committing suicide in the flood.

Reports of looting may lead to declaration of martial law all over the flood zone. Cyclone cellars are already maintaining martial law at Logansport, where one man was drowned, six bridges destroyed and 600 made homeless.

Conditions at Terre Haute are appalling, because of the combined desolation of the combined flood and cyclone and flood.

Tomlinson Hall, in this city, has been thrown open to refugees, being equipped with 500 mattresses and 250 blankets from Fort Benjamin Harrison.

Indianapolis expects partial restoration of water and street car service today, and the rescue work is improving conditions among the homeless refugees.

West Indianapolis is practically under martial law, and none but organized rescuers and persons bearing passes from the Governor's office are permitted to enter that section of the city. State troops are patrolling the district to run down and capture vandals who robbed stores and abandoned homes during the early evening.

BUILDING NEW BOATS TO RESCUE REFUGEES IN THE OHIO VALLEY

PITTSBURGH, March 28.—Telephone messages received here this morning from Wellsville, O., and East Liverpool, O., show that flood conditions in both those towns are critical. At Wellsville all the principal streets except Main street, are inundated, and hundreds have been driven from their homes and forced to seek shelter in churches and other public buildings.

At East Liverpool similar conditions exist and the master mechanic of the Cleveland & Pittsburgh Railroad has set his force of men at work building boats to rescue the people of the city.

A water famine is threatened and the people have been warned that they must use water sparingly. At both East Liverpool and Wellsville, the Ohio River is rising at the rate of 1½ inches an hour.

The Allegheny River here stands stationary at 50.4 and fears of serious disaster in the valley have been allayed. Rains in the upper watershed of the river have ceased and it is expected that from now on the waters will subside, although in some of the small upstate streams the water is still slowly rising.

There is, however, no prospect of restoring railway traffic to Sharon, Pa., for three or four days and female conditions there are likely to become critical before relief can be afforded. Many people there are subsisting on only a few crackers a day.

ROCHESTER FEELS SAFER, THOUGH THE GENESSEE IS HIGH

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 28.—The Genesee River today reached its highest point since the disastrous flood of 1865. Parts of this city and much of the surrounding territory are under water. The property loss will run into the hundreds of thousands. The saving feature of the situation here is that the greater portion of the overflow from the river is running into the Erie Canal. The city authorities under a terrific strain, but engineers say that there is little danger of its collapsing.

The Mohawk valley is badly flooded.

The conditions there were less menacing today, however, because the sudden drop in temperature during the night materially checked the rise of the river.

The south span of the bridge crossing the Mohawk river at Amsterdam was swept away at 10 o'clock.

The conditions in Saratoga County are but little improved. Factories are shut down and trolley traffic is suspended. The bridge across the Hudson river at South Glens Falls went out this morning.

The village of Waterford is partly submerged and cut off from the outside world. No trains or trolley cars are running there.

At Olean a sudden cold wave has checked the flood, but there is much suffering. The Allegheny river has fallen five inches.

CHELSEA NUNS FEAR 700 SISTERS ARE IN FLOOD PERIL

Many people in Boston and New England are anxious to learn the fate of friends or relatives in the flood districts of Indiana and Ohio.

Considerable anxiety is felt in Chelsea for the welfare of more than 700 sisters and novices at the Mother House of Providence at St. Mary's of the Woods, four miles west of Terre Haute, Indiana. The priests of St. Rose's Church, Chelsea, where there are twenty-five sisters of the order teaching in the parochial school, and relatives of several of the sisters and novices who live in Chelsea and Revere have tried to reach St. Mary's by wire, but all attempts have been futile.

No word of any kind has been received from St. Mary's since Sunday, and the Rev. Father Thomas A. Quinlin said today that the sisters in Chelsea and relatives were greatly worried.

Anxiety is also felt for sisters of the order who are stationed at Peru, Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, Indiana. No word has been received from any of these places.

Miss Anna Marks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marks, No. 42 Hancock street, Chelsea, Miss Elsie Sullivan, daughter of John Sullivan, court officer of the Chelsea court; Miss Agnes Ready of Revere, and Mrs. Mary Casey of Spencer avenue, Chelsea, left last week to become members of the order.

Mrs. Mark received a letter Wednesday which was written by her daughter Anna from St. Mary's last Sunday before the flood. This is the last word that has been heard from there.

Mrs. Katherine Cronin, who lives at the corner of Sagamore avenue and Chester street, Chelsea, has a daughter who is a Sister of Providence stationed in Indianapolis, and is greatly alarmed, as no word has been received from there.

Fear for Quincy Girl.

Much anxiety is felt in Quincy for Miss Ruth Parker, assistant physical director of the Y. W. C. A., at Dayton, O. Her father, Theodore Parker, received a letter from her just prior to the disruption of communication with the stricken city. She was a graduate of the Quincy High School and of Sargent's School of Physical Culture in Cambridge.

A telegram was received today by Slater & Morrill, shoe manufacturers of Braintree, from A. C. Barrett, one of the company's salesmen in Omaha, that his home had been destroyed in the cyclone and that all of the members of his family had been injured.

It is feared in Lynn that Everett W. Reede, son of Alfred W. Reede, and Mrs. Harry Welch, wife of Harry Welch, another prominent Lynn citizen, may have lost their lives in the Ohio floods. Reede was in Columbus, O.

Mrs. Welch had been in the West visiting relatives and when last heard from by her husband she was in Springfield, about to leave for Dayton.

College Girl's Home Gone.

Grave fears are expressed for the safety of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph D. Cushing of Middleboro now living in Columbus, Ohio. Mr. Cushing is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Herbert Cushing of Centre street, Middleboro. No word has been received from Mr. Cushing since last week Wednesday.

Dr. Edward S. Hathaway of Middleboro, whose son, Joseph W. Hathaway, has been in Omaha, heard from his today. One of the best soccer football players in New England William Brannigan of the Manchester, N. H., United Club in the Lowell-Lawrence district soccer football league, is at the present time employed in Dayton, Ohio, and his many friends in Manchester are awaiting word from him.

Word was received today that the home of Miss Elsie Gordan, a pupil at the Emerson School of Oratory, at Dayton, Ohio, had been swept away in the recent flood.

Miss Gordan, unable to get a wire through to her parents, said today:

"Somehow I have no fear for my parents' safety, but it is all so very terrible to realize that the home I left only a few weeks ago, should have been wiped out of existence. I cannot begin to estimate our loss yet. I can only hope for the best.

Revere Woman Near Danger.

The friends of Mrs. Mabel Childs of Revere are fearful that she is among the list of victims. She has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Miller, at West Milton, O., several weeks.

Her husband, Windsor F. Childs, mercantile broker of No. 131 State street, said today he was afraid that she had been lost.

The many friends of the Rev. Harry J. Rhoden, who left Manchester, N. H., four years ago to take up a pastorate at Fremont, O., are eagerly awaiting news from him.

REFUGEE TELLS STORY OF SUICIDES DURING PERU FLOOD

PLYMOUTH, Ind., March 28.—The suicides of women crazed by fear when within a few minutes of safety, were vividly described by Gilbert Kessler, one of the flood heroes who escaped from Peru, Indiana, to this city.

"It was too awful ever to forget," said Kessler, with a shudder. "It was cold and damp and misty, and the sight of the black water, rushing on pitilessly, seemed to take the heart out of most of us, especially the women.

"Night and day you could hear the shrieks of women. I was plowing one of the rescue boats to our landing, the court house, and the boat was pretty well filled. One of our passengers was a woman. We were moving rather shaky through one of the main streets when suddenly I saw this woman rise from her seat and begin to wail. 'Oh, what is the use? We'll be drowned anyway,' she said, and plunged into the torrent.

"The next moment I found myself in the water. I saw an arm stick up for a moment. I made a grab for it, but it went down. There was no chance to swim in that Niagara. I struck the stern of our rowboat and seized it with one hand. Then I gradually drew myself aboard. I picked up one of our oarsmen a little later. He was still alive.

"Later we were bringing another boat load to the court house when a woman leaped out, despairing and all of us went over. Again it was a fight and I was engaged in saving myself. Four times altogether I was thrown out and I'm still wondering how I managed to escape.

"The current swept around street corners with tremendous force, and only the most experienced oarsmen could propel craft with any degree of safety. One of the life savers from Michigan City took too wide a turn and we all landed in the tree tops."

Kessler gave a description of the flood on the first night.

"We heard the roaring of lions and neighing of horses and realized that the circus which has Winter quarters at Peru had been engulfed. The lions and other animals in cages died in the trap, roaring until the water swallowed them. The elephants escaped into the water and started for the shore and that was the last we saw of them."

BANGS TELLS ABOUT WEIRD NIGHT WALKS IN FLOODED REGION

John Kendrick Bangs, humorist and lecturer, has arrived in Boston after being held for two days in Columbus by the floods, in spite of his frantic efforts to discover a way out. Speaking of his experiences, the humorist says:

"We spent two days trying to get out of flood-bound Columbus. We took three trains out and two trains back before we made it.

"We walked a quarter-mile trestle twice and thought we fully deserved to get away, but all we found on the other side was a train to take us back to Columbus again. We couldn't go back on the other train. A bridge had been washed out behind us almost as soon as the last car of our train had rolled over it.

"We finally got back to Columbus. The next morning the Big Four sent us on a special train to Crestline, seventy miles from Cleveland. We were lucky enough there to get a train to Boston.

"I never have I seen anything more depressing than the ride from Columbus to Cleveland, last last day. I had traveled between the two cities a few days before. Then the country was dotted with smiling farms. In that short time they had been replaced by a dreary waste of dull, muddy swamps."

ECZEMA BROKE OUT IN PIMPLES

On Arms, then Back and Legs. Itched Very Much. Cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Son in Terrible Shape with Eczema. Now Face and Body Good as Ever.

43 Sidney St., Cambridge, Mass.—"Last September I began to feel itching. I would scratch myself and I could not sleep half the night. The eczema broke out in pimples. It first came on my arms and then my back and my legs. My body and legs were a sight. Water came from the pimples. It itched very much more at night than in the daytime and I would scratch them so sometimes I would make them bleed, trying to get relief. I got a bottle of medicine and also some ointment which did me no good. After I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment I got relief that very night and could sleep. It took about six or seven weeks to cure me.

"My son aged ten years was in terrible shape with eczema. He had it all over his body and also on his face. He was so bad we had to keep him home from school for two weeks. His scratching disfigured his face. There were large sores from his scratching at night on his body and on his face. My wife used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment three times a day. The sore on his face was the worst one. The scab came off and left a red spot as large as a quarter of a dollar. In seven or eight days the red spot faded away and his face and body are as good as ever, not a scar, no disfigurement whatsoever." (Signed) Geo. E. Rogers, Sept. 27, 1912.

Cuticura Soap 25c. and Cuticura Ointment 50c. are sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

☞Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

The Garment Workers' Strike

The present trouble between the Men's Garment Workers and the Clothing Manufacturers is now in its eighth week. Much publicity has been given to it—many statements issued.

The following manufacturers of clothing have reason to believe that thousands of their employees desire to return to work.

The situation in New York City, Rochester and Baltimore has been cleared up in a most satisfactory way to employers and employees.

We shall be glad to open our shops on the same working basis as exists in the above named clothing centers. We are in direct competition with the Clothing Manufacturers in New York, Baltimore and Rochester.

We cannot meet this competition and accept the demands now being made.

The business interests of Boston are sure to suffer unless we are allowed to employ labor on the same terms as it is obtained by competitive manufacturers in other cities.

Boston is not being treated fairly in this situation—and we want it distinctly understood that it is not from any failure on our part to do everything within our power to settle the strike for the best interests of all concerned.

QUIT CALOMEL!

Thousands Are Turning from This Dangerous Drug.

A Safe Vegetable Substitute Is Olive Tablets for the Liver.

Dr. F. M. Edwards, a prominent physician of Ohio, has discovered a new laxative and liver tonic in a combination of vegetable materials, mixed with olive oil, which is, in effect, almost exactly like the old and untrustworthy calomel, except that there are none of the bad after effects of calomel.

Dr. Edwards has long been a foe of calomel, though he recognized its value along with its dangers.

His distrust of the uncertain drug eventually started him years ago towards experiments with the view of discovering a substitute, and he is today in possession of the long-sought-for combination, which is in the shape of a little sugar-coated, olive oil colored tablet.

The results of 17 years' experience and practice are embodied in these marvelous little tablets.

They are called Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. They oil the bowels, and their effect on the liver has been the means of relief to many of Dr. Edwards' regular patients as well as to thousands of others who have suffered and were afraid of calomel.

They are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of harmful impurities. 10c and 25c per box.

Latest Estimates of Dead and Losses in the West

Here are the up-to-date estimates of the dead and property losses by floods throughout the Middle West, as compiled from special dispatches to the AMERICAN:

	DEAD.	PROPERTY LOSS.
Ohio	3,800	$48,670,000
Indiana	771	7,670,000
New York	2	50,000
Pennsylvania	13	4,000,000
West Virginia	2	150,000
Michigan	10	10,000
Nebraska	141	*5,000,000
Totals	4,739	$65,550,000

Railroad traffic and telephone and telegraph communication between the East and West are partially paralyzed.

Governor Cox of Ohio commandeered trains to carry food and blankets to Dayton, where nearly 70,000 persons are in need of food.

The dead in Columbus are still estimated at 1,000, but it will be probably twenty-four hours before any accurate estimate of the fatalities at Dayton can be made.

PUSH RELIEF MEASURES AS DAYTON FLOOD RECEDES

DAYTON, O., March 28.—The water is receding fast, having dropped ten feet in the last twenty-four hours. The down town section is practically free of water now. Fire engines are pumping out the basement of Algonquin Hotel, so that the Algonquin's artesian well supply may be pumped into the empty city water mains for fire protection. It is believed that with the Algonquin supply and that of another artesian wells downtown there will be sufficient water pressure to protect this district.

The Cleveland batallion engineers were the first of a horde of troops which began to pour into Dayton this morning. The Fifth Regiment also arrived today.

The engineers will tackle sanitation problems. The west side is still under water, in some places eighteen feet deep.

Alarming reports that looters, well armed, were active in the district from which water had partly receded have reached the headquarters of the emergency committee. Militia are preparing an expedition to quell the disorder.

Not a House Remains.

The whole of Linwood avenue for a distance of a mile has been swept clean of houses. It is on the west side that the military authorities fear they may find a death toll exceeding former estimates.

So many troops are here and there is so much confusion because of lack of instructions as to whom to report that they are in each others way. However, General Wood expects to have a perfectly organized military system by nightfall.

The fires in the down town section are dying out. Three whole blocks have been burned. The embers are smoldering yet.

Suffering is intensified by the cold, raw weather. Natural gas has been shut off, which means that there is no further heat. Artificial gas is gone and there is no electric power, consequently there is no light except that furnished by candles, and there are mighty few of them.

Death List is Decreasing.

Telephone and telegraph operators are doing their work swathed in blankets, all they can get of them.

Estimates of today placed the number of dead at from 200 to 500. Twenty thousand are believed to be homeless. The suffering here is intense. Food and clothing is badly needed.

Relief stations in Dayton View, the Longfellow School and in Riverdale and the Vancleve School today were crowded with refugees. At both of these stations pneumonia has attacked many of the women and children. The third floor was turned into a hospital and all available doctors were sent to the schoolhouses.

"We must have food and warm clothing," was the urgent message sent out by Mr. Barba. It is not believed the dead in Dayton will exceed 2,000. Deaths all over the State may go over 4,000, if estimates as to the heavy casualties here prove correct.

The Dayton property loss will be $25,000,000.

The weather forecast for the flood zone in Ohio today was colder with brisk northwest winds.

Six hundred persons, who had been reported drowned in the Union station, were rescued today.

Prisoners in the workhouse here are going insane from thirst and fear. Many of them have not touched food since Tuesday.

Search in Debris for Bodies.

So far an actual danger from the flood is concerned the situation in Dayton showed great improvement. The thousands of refugees who had been penned up in buildings in the business district and on its edge were liberated. The water in parts of the city was only a few inches deep today, and persons with gum boots began searching through the mud and debris for bodies. It was expected that the extreme death toll at Dayton would be established with tolerable accuracy before night, and that the actual property loss from the torrent would be known.

Tell of Thrilling Escape.

A. J. Bard of Belmont avenue, who was penned in the City National Bank building on Third street, near Main, Tuesday, was rescued today.

"One hundred and fifty of us were caught in the building," said Bard. "We remained there until the fire started, then we began to plan an escape. We cut the elevator cables, obtained a ball of twine and some small wire from one of the offices. We attracted a boatman, who risked his life to come to us. We gave the boatman one end of the twine and he rowed to the old courthouse.

Hand Over Hand on Cable.

"He then pulled the wire over and after that the heavy cable. One end of the cable was made fast in the bank building and the other in the courthouse. Then as the bank building burned the 150 marooned persons made their way hand over hand along the cable over the swirling torrent to the courthouse. I believe every one, man and woman, reached safety. During our imprisonment I had two crackers and a slice of chipped beef to eat.

"The City Hall did not burn, but the Leonard building just across the street collapsed. Part of the Becket Hotel also crumbled before the waters.

"The fire swept both sides of Third street between Jefferson and St. Clair streets, leaving only the Fourth National bank building standing. You bet I'm glad to get out of it and am deeply grateful to the brave men who came to our rescue."

"One woman, with a ten days' old baby, climbed over the roofs of three houses to reach the rescuers today."

Better conditions also prevailed in Zanesville, Tremont, Tiffin, Chillicothe and Middletown, where the floods were receding. Along the Ohio valley, however, on the southern edge of the State, the situation was worse.

Both Wellsville and East Liverpool, two Ohio River towns, were in darkness last night, being partially submerged. Fifteen thousand were homeless there and in the immediate vicinity.

President Wilson is holding himself ready to come here and establish a White House in this State if his presence would do any good.

One hundred and fifty persons who were penned up in the courthouse at Zanesville by the flood were liberated today. The small towns of Boston and Peninsula, twenty-five and twenty-eight miles south of here, have been inundated by the bursting of a dam. Two hundred and fifty persons are reported drowned there, but as the floods carried down the telephone and telegraph wires, this report could not be confirmed.

Army Officials Delayed.

Revision of earlier estimates gave the following fatalities: Massillon 5, Troy 25, Middletown 38, Chillicothe 25, Hamilton 50, Piqua 50, Millersburg 3, Zanesville 150 to 300. Scattering reports gave about 150 dead or missing.

Secretary of War Garrison, accompanied by Major-General Leonard Wood, U. S. A., Quartermaster-General Aleshire and a party of army surgeons are on their way here, but have been delayed by the floods.

Marietta, at the junction of the Ohio and Muskingum rivers, reported unusual in the situation there. The fire which yesterday threatened a part of the city had been put out.

SECRETARY GARRISON AND GEN. WOOD ON WAY TO STRICKEN DISTRICTS

ROANOKE, Va., March 28.—The train carrying Secretary of War Garrison, Major General Leonard Wood and other army officers to the flooded sections of Ohio, passed through here at 9o'clock. The party will try to reach Dayton, and if that is impossible, to get to Columbus.

GOV. COX WIRES AMERICAN: "WE NEED FUNDS MORE THAN ANYTHING ELSE"

Columbus, Ohio, March 27.

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Your wire received. Conditions in Ohio are indescribable. Means of communication are practically destroyed. The death loss will amount to thousands. Property destroyed worth hundreds of millions. We need and will appreciate funds more than anything else.

JAMES M. COX.

FLOOD BULLETINS.

LOUISVILLE—The Ohio River is rising at an unprecedented rate. It is believed the Ohio Valley within the next forty-eight hours will suffer the most disastrous flood in its history.

ZANESVILLE, O.—At least 150 have perished here and the death list is growing, as buildings in the flood district are collapsing every hour.

INDIANAPOLIS — That several families were trapped and drowned by a sudden rise in lower Salt Creek in Brown County, south of here, was the report today.

HARRISBURG, Pa.—The Susquehanna River passed the danger point of seventeen feet, and at 9:30 a. m. registered eighteen feet. People are rushing to the higher levels.

FRENCH LICK SPRINGS, Ind.—Harry Payne Whitney is among 800 guests marooned, but safe, at the hotel here.

MEADVILLE, Pa.—The greater part of this city and the surrounding territory was under water today, following the overflowing of French Creek. Great damage has been done here, as well as in Saegertown, Valloula and other nearby towns.

CINCINNATI—Thirty-two lives have been lost at Venice, Butler County.

FIRE IS SWEEPING SOUTHERN PART OF ZANESVILLE, OHIO

ZANESVILLE, O., March 28.—Fire is sweeping the southern part of this city. The fire zone is surrounded by thirteen feet of water. The Muskingum River valley below this city is a raging torrent and the lives of scores of persons are menaced. The Muskingum River continues to rise slowly. Half of this city is inundated. Hundreds are homeless and are suffering the keenest misery from the cold weather and lack of food.

The property loss is already placed at $8,000,000. Telegraph communication is cut off. Through the heroism of the telephone girls, partial communication with the outside world is kept up. Over 150 lives have been lost here, but it is believed the final toll will be much higher.

"UNCONSTITUTIONAL" FOR THE BAY STATE TO HELP FLOOD VICTIMS

On the ground that it is unconstitutional, the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives today reported against the admission of a resolve introduced by Representative Thomas J. Giblin of East Boston, appropriating $100,000 for the relief of the tornado and flood sufferers in Ohio and Indiana. The House accepted the report and refused to admit the measure. The Supreme Court at the time of the Johnstown flood ruled that the Legislature could not appropriate any money to be expended outside of the State except for State purposes. Immediately after this action was taken by the House, Representative Cannon of Revere introduced resolutions of sympathy for the flood sufferers, which were referred to the Rules Committee.

DISASTER REVEALS MAN'S DIVINITY, SAYS REV. W. H. RAMSAY

While not "acts of Divine Providence," nor meant to "punish people," the Western floods and tornadoes, said Rev. W. H. Ramsay of Wellesley Hills in King's Chapel this noon, give us opportunity to help one another and thus to demonstrate the real divinity in the human heart. Dr. Ramsay's sermon was in part:

"These dreadful disasters by flood and tornado that have afflicted the West show how helpless is man. While some of these forces man has chained, there are others which lie outside of his control. Here is a flood that sweeps cities away. Don't say that this is an act of Divine Providence, as if these people should be punished in this way. That is an old, delusive teaching.

"There are things in nature that are too big for solution. We must wait for a larger vision of these things.

"But through these disasters in the West, God is speaking to men. Your contributions, through the Red Cross Association, are making your religion one of service to the afflicted, a real religion. You believe in kindness, gentleness and tenderness, and you are showing the way.

"God is speaking through you. There is a great deal of unorganized religion. This flood will allow it to be expressed. People will show sympathy with those deprived of their homes and their children and will do all possible to help them. This is real religion."

MIAMISBURG DEAD ARE 25; PROPERTY LOSS IS ENORMOUS

COLUMBUS, O., March 28.—Telephone communication to Miamisburg, twelve miles below Dayton on the Miami River, was restored today, and it was learned that the death list is now placed at twenty-five. It is believed this represents the total loss of life in Miamisburg. The town has suffered great property loss, and the water still stands eight feet deep in the streets.

Will This Last Sacrifice Win Beautiful Mrs. Leeds?

You Should Enjoy Your Meals

One of the Most Important Questions to Consider in the Search for Happiness and Health.

If your stomach cannot digest your food, what will? Where's the relief? The answer is in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because, as all stomach troubles arise from indigestion and because one ingredient in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is able to thoroughly and completely digest 3,000 grains of food, doesn't it stand to reason that these tablets are going to digest all the food and whatever food you put into your stomach?

You Can Eat With the Appetite of a Lusty Youngster, if You Help Your Stomach.

Science nowadays can digest food with out having it enter the stomach at all. And Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the result of this scientific discovery. They digest, and digest thoroughly and well, anything and everything you eat.

The burning question to you is, "Are you getting out of life all the pleasure and the health you are entitled to?" If not, why not?

No matter whether every organ and member of your body is in a sound state of health and strength, if your stomach is in any way disordered, you are not going to be "yourself." You are going to be a worried, out-of-sorts, nervous or sullen individual whose actions will reflect your condition inside, and people will naturally avoid you.

So, if your stomach refuses to work or can't work, and you suffer from eructations, bloat, brash, fermentation, biliousness, sour stomach, heartburn, irritation, indigestion, or dyspepsia of whatever form, just take one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and see the difference. It doesn't cost you much to prove it. Then you can eat all you want what you want, whenever you want, if you use these tablets, and you can look the whole world in the face with a beaming eye and you will have a cheerful spirit, a pleasant face, a vigorous body and a clear mind and memory and everything will look and taste delicious to you. That's life.

Get a 50 cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store.

LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL, GLOSSY HAIR, NO DANDRUFF--25 CENT "DANDERINE"

Hair coming out?—If dry, brittle, thin or your scalp itches and is full of dandruff—Use "Danderine."

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of Dandruff or a loose or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you will actually see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine will immediately double the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Dan-derine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove to yourself tonight—now—that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

—Kind of planning back of this Filene building.
—Kind of planning back of the Filene business!

WISH we could take you with us some time and put you in touch with the CO-OPERATION that exists between us and the enthusiasts who make our men's clothes.

Wish you could follow the fashioning of these clothes, from the original planning to the little final touches that make them such different clothes—so goodly different, so differently good.

As with the Filene building and the Filene business, the planning is on the broadest possible scale; but in the carrying out of those plans the veriest trifle of detail is regarded as of utmost value.

Several times every shoulder is handled INDIVIDUALLY in search of the true shoulder point. That means FIT.

Every collar is wholly hand-done: felled outside and hand padded. Every sleeve is basted in by hand, often put in and out many times before absolutely perfect lines result. (Such a difference from the old way!)

To obtain the proper soft-roll lapel nothing but the most skilled HUMAN workmanship will suffice. Lapels are no longer a matter of horsehair but of workmanship.

We might go on almost indefinitely, telling of the HUMAN element that goes into Filene clothes for men.

It is put there by men who love their work—by men who are just as enthusiastic over this new store for men as we are—men whose success is bound up in our success: a success already achieved.

Clothes made by machinery, in a hit-or-miss fashion, are the kind of clothes sold by machine-like men to men who don't care.

Not an inkling of that enters into this Spring assemblage of GOODLY DIFFERENT and DIFFERENTLY GOOD apparel for men.

FROM 600 TO 1,000 DEAD IN COLUMBUS; 15,000 HOMELESS

Situation in the Capital City Is Growing Worse, According to Latest Reports.

COLUMBUS, O., March 28.—With the recession of the flood waters of the Scioto, the number of dead in Columbus was estimated at from 600 to 1,000, but it was conceded that it will probably be twenty-four hours before the authorities would be in a position to give an accurate count.

That part of the city between Central and Sandusky avenues has been practically wiped out

The number of homeless here is placed at 15,000

The bodies of 200 persons were found in the United Brethren Church on Avondale avenue, according to information given to the authorities by O. H. Ossman, an undertaker, who was among the first to visit the inundated section. Ossman also said he had counted at least 200 bodies in the wreckage along West Park avenue. Hundreds who were marooned in the upper floors of their homes or upon the roofs were taken to points of safety throughout the night. The rescuers did not stop for darkness, but by the light of lanterns and torches carried on their relief work

Shoot Looters on Sight.

Troop B, Ohio National Guard, was on duty in the flood zone under orders from Governor Cox to shoot looters on sight. This order was issued after several persons reported at the State House that ghouls were going through the flood district rifling dead bodies and breaking into buildings which were partially submerged.

It is feared that the cold wave which has followed the flood will cause a great amount of sickness here. Many children were exposed to the cold in drenching garments for forty-eight hours. Some of the marooned flood refugees became so benumbed from the cold winds that they toppled from their places of refuge into the water and were drowned

The worst side is a scene of vast desolation. Scenes of grief arising from horrible deaths in the flood or from the separation of families were reported. Many persons were carried to death in houses which were washed away while they screamed in an insanity of fear to the refugees upon other housetops to save them.

The extent of the awful tragedies will not be fully known until the masses of wreckage house and uprooted trees which are strewn on the lowlands south of the city are uncovered. This mass of debris was revealed by the receding flood today.

Loss is $8,000,000.

Every available inch of space in the Columbus State Hospital for the Insane and the Mount Carmel Hospital on the Hilltop is occupied by refugees. Food is being distributed by troops and volunteers. The monetary loss here is estimated at from $7,000,000 to $8,000,000.

Fire Chief Lauer, who was marooned on a hilltop, lost beyond the flooded section, said he saw scores of persons standing on their porches as the flood swept down the lowlands, and that he did not see how any of them could possibly have escaped

The State Health Department is uniting with the American Red Cross to take precautionary measures to prevent an epidemic from sweeping the State. Governor Cox commandeered trains today to carry State troops, food stuffs and other supplies into the flood zone.

TELEPHONE GIRLS TELL OF SUFFERING BY ZANESVILLE FLOOD

CLEVELAND, O., March 28.—A graphic story of flood horrors at stricken Zanesville is the word picture given by Miss Arline Barnell, one of four marooned telephone girls at the exchange office in that city, over a long distance line into this city today

"For the first time in two days we see a glimmer of hope," she said. "The river has stopped rising and if there are no more rains and the reservoirs in the valley above us hold the water will begin to recede by sundown.

"But still the situation here is awful. The river is four miles wide and most of the houses are under up to the second and third stories.

"We must have food or starve. Hundreds have been killed by the flood and as many more will die unless relief reaches us soon.

"The office in which I have been working with three other girls is just outside the flood district. From the front window we can see bodies floating in the water and everywhere the scene is horrible.

"The electric light plant has been swept away and last night the city was in darkness. Our only light was from the one gas main that has not broken.

"Every few minutes some noises louder than the tremendous tumult of the water tells us that another building has collapsed

"The water is thirty feet deep in some parts of the city, and bodies are floating around in it and parts of houses and dead animals can be seen

"Don't forget to tell people to send us food and clothing, water and medicine."

FLOOD HITS BOSTON IN CRIPPLED TRAIN AND MAIL SERVICE

Boston and New England at large is suffering from the floods in Ohio in the form of crippled train service to the West and delayed mails and freight.

There is a serious delay in mail congestion on both sides of the flood belt Trains going West are being held up at Cleveland and trains coming East are not guaranteed beyond St. Louis on the other side

Passenger service has suffered heavily and freight service has been demoralized far more.

At the offices of the Boston & Albany road at the South Station, it was announced today that there was no telling how much longer these washout conditions would prevail. An official of the road said:

"We have not got any definite news yet from the flood district. No reports have been made as to whether any trains were lost, or lives lost. Neither can we tell the damage to rolling stock or how much trackage has been destroyed

The Albany road has been obliged to announce that its sleeping cars due to leave Boston at 10.00 a. m. and 2 p. m. for St. Louis and Cincinnati will run only as far as Cleveland and that the Pittsburgh sleeper leaving at 10.30 a. m. will run no further than Youngstown, O., until further notice

The so-called "Big Four" lines are the most seriously affected by the floods. Cleveland is the terminus for that road for the present. All points on the "Big Four" are subject to delay, according to present tidings.

No trouble is being experienced as yet in the Boston to Chicago traffic or on the Lake Shore & Michigan.

The freight situation on the "Big Four" is naturally more serious than the passenger service. At present the inundated and wrecked areas of Ohio have cut a nice right out of the railroad service in the Middle West

At the Central Pocahontas, it was said that through Western mails were delayed and congested on both sides of the flood region

LOSS OF LIFE IN AND NEAR ZANESVILLE, OHIO, REPORTED ABOUT 500

ZANESVILLE, O., March 28.—Thousands of homeless are suffering from the cold and from lack of supplies. Reports today declared that the loss of life in the Muskingum valley will reach 500. Calls for extra militiamen were sent to nearby towns, as the local guardsmen have been on duty here for seventy-two hours and are worn out.

Several houses were burned to the water's edge during the night Many buildings have collapsed. A number of persons marooned on the third and fourth floors of the higher buildings were rescued by police and firemen

Many of the refugees are on the verge of insanity. Several men and women who lost all their loved ones in the floods attempted to leap into the torrents, but were held back by force. Estimates today place the number of houses swept away at between 500 and 600.

The gas, water and heat supply is broken.

Ohio Flood Is Worse Than Galveston or Johnstown, Columbus Editor Tells American

Columbus, Ohio, March 27

Editor Boston American:

The flood situation is worse in Ohio than either Galveston or Johnstown, Pa. What is needed at once is food and physicians. Money will do no good right now. People want something to eat and supplies will run low in two more days.

BANGOR COUPLE SAW TRAIN RACE WITH CYCLONE

Chased by a cyclone which eventually overtook the railroad train on which they were riding, was the strange experience related by Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Stillman of Bangor, Me., who have just arrived at Young's Hotel, after a trip through the Ossaia cyclone zone

While crossing Ohio, near Goodland, the Stillmans, crowded with other passengers on the observation platform at the rear of their train, saw the onrush of funnel-shaped cloud of the tornado sweeping up behind them. Mr. Stillman said today:

The engineer saw the cloud coming, and opened wide the throttle of his engine. The gain of the cyclone in its advance race with the train full of anxious humanity was slow but sure

Just as the coaches piled into Goodland, the noise of the train was drowned by the roar of the mighty wind. We saw telegraph poles and buildings on both sides of us laid flat as if they were pasteboard

We saw one aged couple run out of their house screaming at the top of their voices. The next minute the building was lifted from its foundations and dropped in the middle of a field some distance away

The same powerful rush of wind picked up both of the old people. They were hurled bodily into the middle of the swirl of debris

UNITED DRUG CO. SENDS FLOOD AID

The United Drug Company of Boston, owners of the Rexall drug stores, have sent T. V. Woolen, secretary of the International Rexall Club, and C. H. Zimmerman, assistant sales manager of the United Drug Company, to the flood district in Ohio with instructions to establish Rexall drug stores in the flooded districts and to aid the families of proprietors and clerks and to send all telegrams for them free. These two men carried bank checks with them to draw for all relief work up to any amount.

CONNECTICUT RIVER FLOOD IS WORST YET

Swollen by the heavy rainfall which has for many hours prevailed along the Connecticut watershed, the Connecticut River has gone on the wildest rampage in its history New high water marks were reported today

Dams and bridges are threatened.

At White River Junction, Vt., a covered wooden bridge across the White River astray went out. It was swept down the river in the rapid current, striking the Passumpsic Railroad bridge, which was itself considerably in danger of giving way.

The water at White River Junction was six feet higher than ever before recorded. Traffic north of Brattleboro on the Boston & Maine was suspended early. At Brattleboro the river was reported higher than the record mark of 1875.

Northampton was completely cut off from Mt. Tom, the greater part of the Mt. Tom line of the Northampton street railway being under two feet of water. At Northampton the water almost reached the eighteen foot mark. At Holyoke ten feet of water was flowing over the crest of the dam.

At Westfield the branch of the river there rose several feet during the night. At Frophole, near Springfield, a portion of the car track had to be abandoned.

The West Springfield meadows were completely inundated Many of the market farms below the Chicopee bridge were overrun with water At Hartford the water was reported as rising steadily at the rate of three inches an hour.

At Brattleboro, Vt., the Connecticut reached the highest mark ever known At Rocket, in this State, the dam at Red Pond was menaced

At Dalton fifty feet of embankment went out near the Hanchate dam. It is not expected that the Crane mills will be [illegible] sectionally inconvenienced, as they are operated by motor power.

North Adams for a time was practically cut off from the outside world so far as road communications are concerned. Washouts on the Boston & Maine to the west have caused great delays

BACKACHE A WARNING ALL SHOULD HEED

It is One of the First Signs of Kidney Troubles, if Neglected, Serious Diseases Follow.

No one can be well and healthy unless the kidneys work properly and keep the blood pure When they become clogged up and inactive nature has a way of warning you.

Backache is one of the first symptoms. You may also be troubled with disagreeable, annoying bladder disorders, have attacks of lumbago or rheumatism; become nervous, tired, and feel all worn out; puffy swellings show under the eyes or in the feet and ankles, and many other symptoms are noticed If they are neglected, dropsy, diabetes or Bright's disease, which so often proves fatal may result

It is not only dangerous, but needless for you to suffer and endure the tortures of these troubles, for the new discovery Croxone quickly and surely ends all such misery

There is no more effective remedy known for the prompt cure of all such troubles than take new, scientific preparation because it removes the cause. It seeks right into the sources, through the veins and linings, clears out the clogged up pores, neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and waste matter that lodge in the joints and muscles and causes all the terrible rheumatic pains and makes the kidneys sicker and stir the poison out of the blood and drive it from the system

You will find Croxone different from all other remedies. There is nothing else on earth like it. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results.

You can secure an original package of Croxone at trifling cost from any first-class drug store. All druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case. Three doses is often all that is needed to cure the worst backache, relieve rheumatic pains, or overcome urinary disorders.

FOUR MONTHS' AGING MAKES

Brewed in NOV. 1912 On Sale in MARCH 1913

Harvard EXPORT (GREEN LABEL) BEER

THE BEST BEER TO BUY

WHAT AGING MEANS TO US

To have beer four months old we require extra extensive storage cellars in which to store it that ages.
It means a heavy investment in buildings, vats, materials and aging beer, more of an investment than most brewers are willing to make.
It means an extra force of skilled workmen and extra care attending over this long period.

WHAT AGING MEANS TO YOU

A beer with an extreme mellowness of flavor.
A beer with a delightful smoothness of taste.
A beer that has been thoroughly fermented and ripened, the yeast being thoroughly eliminated.
A brilliancy of appearance that only age can bring.

James B. Nicholson, of Boston, in the County of Suffolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, first being duly sworn, doth make oath and says:

That he is the President of the Harvard Brewing Company, a corporation engaged in the brewing at mail liquors and having its usual place of business in Lowell in the County of Middlesex and said Commonwealth;

That all Harvard Export Beer (green label) has been brewed four months before it is offered for sale to the public

That said Harvard Export Beer which is now offered to the public was brewed during the month of November, 1912; and

That all Harvard Export Beer which shall be offered to the public will, in the future, as now, have been brewed at least four months prior to the date of offering for sale;

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the said James B. Nicholson has hereunto set his hand and seal the first day of March, A. D. 1913.

O'MEARA RAPS NEW LAW TO SEARCH WOMEN

Police officers must search thousands of arrested women under a condition of disorder and indecency which would be preposterous," according to Deputy Commissioner O'Meara, if a law passed by the Legislature, to become effective April 5 is followed to the letter.

A fine of $100 is the penalty for failure of the commanding officer to conduct the search. The bill provides:

Whenever a person is arrested for a criminal offense and is taken to or confined in a jail, police station, lockup or other place, the officer in charge thereof shall immediately examine the prisoner, and if he finds any bruises, cuts or other injuries shall forthwith make a written report thereof to the chief of police of the city or town concerned, except that in Boston the report shall be made to the police commissioner, and in towns where there is no chief of police the report shall be made to the selectmen.

Mr. O'Meara in a general order to the departments says, in part:

I am unable to advise the department as to the manner in which this act is to be obeyed. Judging from the record of its passage through the Legislature, it requires that every prisoner received at a station house or a lockup shall be examined immediately by the officer in charge, and that the examination shall be compared immediately with the clothing of the prisoner.

It is in Boston the persons arrested annually exceed 70,000, of whom more than 7,000 are women, and of the women are almost 50,000 in number more than 4,000 women are intoxicated.

In view of the protest of society women over the searching of girl garment strikers, Commissioner O'Meara recently issued an order providing that women should be searched by police matrons only, except in cases where immediate action was imperative.

JOE WOOD MAY OPPOSE PIRATE HITTERS TODAY

By L. R. MURDOCH.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 28.—Jake Stahl carried over from yesterday and tried again today to pay a ball game with the Pirates. He said this morning that if the game could be played and Joe Wood was in form he would use the "Speed Boy" in the second game in the series. Charley Hall was the alternative veteran twirler.

Stahl expects to give Mosely, the last of his recruit pitchers, a chance, too. Contrary to intention, this Red Sox-Pirates series is being taken seriously by the players, and it remains to be seen whether it will have a good or bad effect on them. The managers were to give their youngsters a thorough trial against big league opponents and the veterans who played were to use the games for conditioning purposes.

Men Taking Games Seriously.

Instead, each team went after the other with a vengeance from the start. Recruits were shoved into the background except where their use was necessary, and the games have been played with all the snap and energy that is put into the game in the big league season. While the men of both teams seem to have reported in condition to stand this, it is entirely against the rules of experience that men can play that kind of ball in March without suffering from it later.

While no disastrous result in physical condition have yet been noticed, minor injuries have been frequent and both teams have several men on the bench list. Their injuries are not serious but it is not unlikely, for instance, that the accident to Bobby Byrne will affect his batting prowess this season and that Joe Wood be cautious, perhaps too much so, of his speed because of the "flooring" of the Pirates' third baseman. Gardner's throwing arm will not be up to form when the season opens and the wounds of the other slight casualties will tend to slow up the teams later on when top speed is necessary.

The storm general over the Middle West struck Hot Springs not seriously but sufficiently to keep the Red Sox and Pirates off the playing field for the past two days.

A heavy rain storm Tuesday was followed by severe cold Wednesday and yesterday so that yesterday's game between the Sox and Pirates could not be played. It was postponed until today. Both teams took a long tramp over the mountains. The Red Sox were marooned here today to all intents and purposes. There have been no Eastern mails in or out since Tuesday.

Persons who left here this week for the East have gone no farther than St. Louis, where they have been held up since Monday, and when one train, and it was five hours late arrived in Hot Springs yesterday.

INTERNATIONAL MEET WOULD BE BOOM TO SPORT

By J. O. JOHNSTONE.

When Harvard and Yale sent a team over to England to meet Oxford and Cambridge in the Summer of 1910, the American college athletes returned with reports of the courtesy of our English cousins.

The general good feeling between the two countries' athletic leaders was revived to a great extent. The ill-feeling resulting from some misunderstanding in the Olympic games of 1908 was practically, but not wholly, blotted out.

Next June, or the early part of July, if the present plans of bodies such a set of games on this side of the water are carried through, it will not only be a great benefit to the colleges, but also will instil the present good feelings and put them on a firm basis.

Would Benefit Both Countries.

There will be less talk of poor sportsmanship on both sides of the Atlantic. As there is not much chance of holding the Olympics in either England or America for some years to come, the Oxford-Cambridge vs. Harvard-Yale dual meet would be a fine opportunity for each nation to prove its good sportsmanship.

It looks as though the meet will take place. Harvard authorities are greatly in favor of it, and are now expecting participation from the Yale Athletic Committee. Freshmen will be allowed to compete in this meet, for it comes after graduation and the present first-year men will be ranked as sophomores. Ten varsity teams of Harvard and Yale will, surely be strengthened by Bingham and probably Rollins and Biddle of the Harvard squad will be included.

Oler Star in Jump.

Wesley Oler, captain of the Yale freshman track team, ought to be counted in on the high jump. He holds the world's intercholastic outdoor record of 6 feet 3¾ inches, and was a member of the Olympic team which went to Stockholm last Summer. Although nothing has been heard of him during the indoor season, he is very apt to be a surprise this Spring, for he jumps better out of doors.

President Wilson to Throw Out First Ball

WASHINGTON, March 28.—President Wilson will throw the first ball at the opening game here April 10, and will have in his pocket at the time pass No. 1, beautifully engraved, from Ban Johnson, entitling him to free admission at any game between American League clubs.

This is the first pass or present of any character accepted by President Wilson. It was presented by Ben Minor, president of the Washington club.

PILGRIMS MEET TORONTO TEAM IN THE SOUTH

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

MACON, Ga., March 28.—The Pilgrims will battle with Joe Kelley's Toronto champions here today, if the weather permits. These two teams were scheduled to clash in the first of their three game series yesterday, but it was necessary to call off the game on account of rain. This was a big disappointment to Manager Stallings of the Boston outfit.

The Pilgrims are still in only fair condition. They were unable to do much practising at Athens on account of rain, but they did have several splendid workouts at Atlanta. Stallings was hoping that he would experience good weather here.

Toronto has a slashing team and if a game is played today Kelley's men are sure to give a fine account of themselves. There are many former Boston stars in the ranks of the International League team, and they are sure that they are capable of vanquishing the team piloted by Stallings.

Stallings was somewhat disappointed by the showing of his team in Atlanta, but he says that the players will improve greatly when the weather becomes warm.

JOE SILVA AND HARRY JENSEN IN ROAD RACE

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

(Quarter-Mile Champion of the United States and Canada.)

Judging from the character of the entries in the annual Catholic cross-country race of the St Mary's Catholic Association of Cambridge, the race this year promises to be one of the closest and best contests of this kind ever held in New England.

Among the prominent stars entered, Harry Jensen the former Pastime A. C. runner, appears to have the call. Jensen will make this race a tryout for the annual B. A. A. marathon that will take place on April 19. The great New York hill and dale athlete has been training for some time for the classic B. A. A. marathon, and is determined to win the St. Mary's ten-mile race. He will have to show his best form, however, to defeat the field that is entered against him.

Jensen to Start from Scratch.

He, of course, will start from scratch and has allotted handicaps up to six minutes to the slower men. Many of these are "dark horses" and may surprise the field as every year at this time numerous athletes from the rural sections come to Boston to compete in the cross-country runs.

They are given good marks and they invariably run away with the events. This is liable to happen this time, but the athlete who flashes across the tape ahead of Jensen will have to do some great runs.

Entries have been received from New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Most of these will be "dark horses," as they are all new men. Not since the days of the old Cambridgeport Gym has the St Mary's Association ever conducted such a big race.

All of the prominent men connected with the A. A. U. will be officials at this race. Mayor J. Edward Barry of Cambridge will be honorary referee.

Silva Out to Win.

In addition to the entries already received, it is assured that Joseph Silva, the B. A. A. cross-country runner, will be an added starter, as will Cook, who will also represent the Unions Club. He has yet to meet defeat at the hands of any of the local men, and has made many trips to New York, competing against the best men in the Metropolitan district and always putting up a good showing. He will start from the post of honor with Jensen, and this should be a battle royal between these two rivals, for Silva is in perfect condition and will make the running all the way.

ALGER HAS SHADE IN SLOW CONTEST

AUGUSTA, Me., March 28.—Young McDonough of Manchester and George Alger of Cambridge boxed two six-round bouts here. Sports generally gave Alger a trifle the lead, although no serious damage was done by either boxer. Alger got in a few face blows in the early part of the contest and toward the close rushed McDonough to the ropes several times. Alger received some severe swings on the neck and side of the head. Bob Lefarre of Brockton sent Young Boucher of Auburn to the floor for the full count in the first round.

LE MARIN AND CUTLER SIGNED TO CLASH HERE

"Little" George Tuohey has been heard from again. The skilful local wrestling promoter has kept very quiet for some time but has once more come to the front and this time he announces that he has signed Constant Le Marin, the big Belgian wrestler, to meet Charley Cutler, the American heavyweight wrestling champion, in a finish match, best two falls out of three, in Mechanics Building on Monday evening, April 7.

This match should be a sizzler. According to all reports, Le Marin is a rattling good wrestler. He has made a fine reputation in the West and in the Old World and should give a great account of himself.

Tuohey at first tried to get Zbyszko to clash with Le Marin, but as the latter wanted about all of the money in the United States treasury, the State House, the City Hall and part of the Commons for his services, Cutler was substituted in his place. Cutler is all to the merry when it comes to giving a wrestwind exhibition on the mat.

OFFICIALS SELECTED FOR TITLE BOUTS

The Boxing Committee of the New England A. A. A. U. has selected the following officials for the New England amateur boxing championships, to be held at Mechanics Building April 7:

Referees—A. J. Lee, Jr., John Norton and John Buckley. Judges—Paul J. Revere, Harry D. Hall, Leonard P. Hall, Harry Sweet, Hall, Wood, Brookman, Hoyt, Le Baron, Cook, Hall, Hodgson, Ryan and Hall. Clerk of Ring—Frank W. H. Hynes, T. J. Cornish, E. F. Wade and J. J. Wade. Assistant Clerk of Ring—Harry Hodgson, D. J. Leonard and G. V. Brown. Announcer, B. B. Orthwein, chairman of games. Dr. F. J. Lery and Daniel Lacy.

PRES. TO OPEN SEASON.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—President Wilson today agreed to pitch the first ball on April 10 when the American League season opens here.

Cambridge Eleven to Battle Everett Thanksgiving Day

The Everett High and Cambridge High and Latin school football teams have signed a tentative agreement to meet in an annual game on Thanksgiving Day. The games are to alternate between Everett and the University City. Everett has been looking for a suitable opponent for many seasons past, and Teacher-Manager Marks has finally been able to secure the Cambridge team for the big holiday game.

Everett has played Chelsea High on Thanksgiving Day for a number of years. Chelsea, however, has become woefully weak in athletics lately and has been unable to give the strong Everett eleven any kind of a stiff engagement.

Boston English High School, which up to two years ago had not met Everett in any branch of athletics, was not on the 1912 schedule, but it has been given a date next Fall.

Everett's Melrose, Malden, Medford and Somerville High games in the Suburban League series will be played on succeeding Saturdays in November. Everett's schedule:

October 4—Haverhill High at Haverhill.
October 11—Revere High at Everett.
October 18—Boston College High at Everett.
October 25—Lowell High at Lowell.
November 1—Lynn English High School at Everett.
November 8—Malden High at Everett (Suburban League).
November 15—Medford High at Everett (Suburban League).
November 22—Somerville High at Somerville (Suburban League).
November 27—Cambridge High and Latin at Everett.

NEW YORK TO HOLD GYMNASTIC MEET

NEW YORK, March 28.—The Amateur Athletic Union championship committee has announced that the National Gymnastic championships will be held at the West Side Young Men's Christian Association Gymnasium in this city on Saturday evening, April 19. The chairman of the championship committee has already received applications for entry blanks from Baltimore, Chicago, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Buffalo, Albany, as well as many larger colleges.

LEO HOUCK WINNER IN FAST CONTEST

LANCASTER, Pa., March 28. Leo Houck of Lancaster and Dick Gilbert of Jacksonville went six hot, slugging rounds at the Lancaster A. C. here, resulting in Houck giving Gilbert a sound drubbing.

CLUB STANDS BY REFUSAL TO MEET LIPTON

NEW YORK, March 28.—The New York Yacht Club, by a unanimous vote, upholds the refusal of the challenge committee to reconsider its declination of Sir Thomas Lipton's challenge for the America Cup.

Less than fifty members attended as it was taken for granted by a majority that the challenge committee took the only proper action under the circumstances.

All that appears to remain for Sir Thomas to do now, if he really desires to race for the America Cup, is to issue an unrestricted challenge.

HARVARD SOCCER MEN LEAVE FOR ITHACA

The Harvard Soccer team left for Ithaca this morning, where on Saturday they will play Cornell in one of the series of games for the intercollegiate championship. The squad includes Nichols, Rushmore, Barrett, Weston, Francke, McCall, Hardner, Lee, Hardwick, Carmichael, C. F. Lowery, F. T. Hopkins, Needham, Coach Burgess and Manager Storrs.

MOHL IS WINNER.

In a match that was filled with cyclonic features, Fritz Mohl, the "valiant German," defeated George Sandele in two straight falls in the catch-as-catch-can wrestling match at the Grand Opera House last night. The first fall came after sixteen minutes and thirteen seconds, and the final and winning fall was earned in twelve minutes.

TUFTS BASEBALL MEN PREPARE FOR FIRST CONTEST SATURDAY

The Tufts College baseball squad was given a short session of indoor fielding practice in the cage in Goddard Gymnasium yesterday afternoon. Coach Cannell will pick a team from his players to meet the Somerville Young Men's Club team on a diamond in the latter city next Saturday afternoon and he wants to see his men at work this afternoon before making a selection. Somerville team is composed of last year's nine and Coach Cannell is anxious to see how they shape up on some of his material during the game.

PHILADELPHIA MAN IN B. A. A. CLASSIC

Entries for the B. A. A. Marathon keep pouring in to Athletic Manager George V. Brown. John Wise of the Northwestern Boys' Club of Philadelphia, is the latest athlete to enter. Wise is a distance runner of great promise and like the others who enter the annual road classic, feels he has a chance to annex the beautiful trophy that goes to the winner.

MASON HAS SLIGHT LEAD ON BUZZY

Buzzy gained nine points on Mason in the second night's play of three cushion billiards at the White Bear Billiard Hall. Mason is still leading by the narrow margin of two points, the score being Mason 100, Buzzy 98. The game tonight will be the deciding one, and there is considerable doubt as to the probable winner.

BOB LEE IS UP TO OLD RING TRICKS

NEW YORK, March 28.—Bob Lee, the colored comedian-heavyweight boxer, was stopped in the opening round of a scheduled ten-round bout with Kid Pluto at the Brooklyn Beach A. C. "Turkey" Griffin knocked out Young Peter Jackson in the first round of another 10-round bout.

SOMERVILLE TEAM WINS FROM BOSTON

The Somerville Y. M. C. A. basketball team defeated the Boston Y. M. C. A. team last night in the Somerville Y. M. C. A. gymnasium by the score of 32 to 25. The game was fast and interesting throughout. The Somerville team showed a marked improvement over their last game with the Boston team.

BROOKLYN TEAM IN SHAPE FOR SEASON

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 28.—A rain storm and a cold wind halted the practice of Manager Dahlen and his Superbas here. The team as a whole is in much better condition right now that it was when it reached Brooklyn last Spring, after a month's battle with rain, snow and hail through the Middle West.

MAGNUS IS BEATEN.

PHILADELPHIA, March 28.—Frank Jones of Philadelphia defeated Leo Magnus, New York, in a national three-cushion league billiard match here, 60 to 57, in 80 innings.

NOONAN IN CHARGE OF WESLEYAN NINE

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., March 28.—P. J. Noonan, the Wesleyan baseball coach, has arrived here from Wilkes Barre, Pa., and has taken over the large baseball squad.

Prospects are the brightest in years at Wesleyan, as the pitching staff, which has heretofore proved weak, is very strong. Noonan speaks highly of the work of Bacon, the football star, and Lanning, a southpaw from Chicago, who is eligible now. The team is in fairly good shape. It plays Yale in the first game of the season at New Haven April 12.

Willetts and Egan to Battle in Bout at Gloucester Club

The Lenox Athletic Club of Gloucester has matched Joe Fagan of South Boston and Kid Willetts of Fall River for the feature bout of ten rounds at its next show, which will be held on next Thursday night. The semi-final match of eight rounds will be between Rodie McDonald of St. John and Young McLoud of Gloucester. A other bout will be put on between said boys.

Willetts has met some of the leading welterweights in New England, and has said Ray Wood a draw. He is the kind f a boxer who will make the South Boston lightweight travel at top speed to avoid defeat

FEW OUTCURVE PITCHERS IN MAJORS TODAY

Since Long Tim Hughes was officially counted out among the American League clubs it has been noticeable that there has been no pitcher in the organization possessing the wonderful sweeping out curve with which the former Washington twirler used to mow down the opposition.

The out curve was probably the first curve to be invented. Since then all sorts and varieties of benders have been introduced by pitchers with which opposing sluggers were to be fooled.

Nothing More Puzzling.

And, yet, after all is said and done, the fact remains that if a pitcher has a good "barn door" out in his repertoire he stands a good chance of getting away with his game.

When one comes to think of it, there is scarcely any kind of a ball that puzzles a batter more than this ball, unless it be the spitter. Try as they may to the contrary, heavy hitters often make idiots of themselves going after one of those roundhouse twists dished up between a spitter and a fast one

It's a tantalizing ball and the very fact that it is so old is something in its favor, for the men hitting very often are not looking for it. It works in the same way as a slow ball. Hitters are not expecting it and swing their heads off when it comes floating up to the plate.

His big out was Hughes' main asset, and with it he managed to stick in the big league long after he was good for nothing but the minors. And his list of strike-outs bore witness to the fact that it was a good asset, too.

Chapman Likes Curve.

Men with ability to knock this ball a mile or so are very scarce. If they knew it was coming it would not be a hard thing to do. But they don't—and very often strike out trying to clam it over the fence.

Ray Chapman, Nap shortstop is one of the few players who likes a big curve of this sort. Ray is always delighted when he hears the man to pitch against Cleveland on a certain day has a curve ball as his standby. Chappie is sure of one or two singles for the course of this fact

Last year, when he was in the American Association, where curve are mighty plenty of this type, Chapman collected a mighty batting average before they found out that he could on the ball other players could not touch.

COWBOY PUGILIST LOOKS LIKE REAL "HOPE"

M'CARTY CERTAIN HE CAN BEAT JOHNSON

By JACK CONWAY.

Jack Johnson's heavyweight throne is tottering. The unpopular negro from Galveston has reigned supreme in the ranks of the big fellows for almost three years. But his pugilistic star is settling in a clouded sky.

Luther McCarty, a big, bright-eyed, happy-go-lucky young man from the distant West, has caused gloom in Johnson's camp. This already batter has attracted world-wide attention. A year ago he was an unknown preliminary fighter, while today his name is a household word wherever sport loving events are held.

McCarty has been showing at a local theatre this week, and he has impressed Boston fight "fans" by his clean cut make up and his clever work in his bouts with his sparring partners.

The writer has followed McCarty's career very closely from the night that he vanquished Carl Morris in six rounds at Springfield, Mo. I saw McCarty work out the first of the week, but was anxious to meet him at close range.

McCarty Mountain of Strength.

I got my opportunity early last evening at the Hotel Brewster, where the white heavyweight champion is stopping during his stay in Boston. He was surrounded by his manager, Billy McCarney, Johnny Meehan of the Lewis Mooney and Lew Morris, old pals of McCarney, and the former Philadelphia boy, ex-promoter and manager, who has not forgotten his friends in his prosperity.

McCarty is a huge fellow, 6 feet 2¾ inches tall. He looks like a mountain of strength and endurance. His hair is dark brown, while his merry blue eyes flash good-naturedly from under a pair of dark eyebrows

The champion dresses like a college student, and Johnny Mooney believes that he would make Ted Coy, Charley Brickley, Jim Thorpe, Percy Wendell and the other great gridiron heroes look like second raters.

The thing in McCarty's makeup, however, which impresses one even more than his wonderful physical development is his good nature. He looks and acts like a schoolboy on a holiday. When introduced to the writer, he could not refrain from tickling me in the ribs with a short left hook. It would have been no fight if we had met in a room and I duly carried pets on the floor, but the floor of the ring was sister, and as Lucky was no soft spot upon which I could rest.

McCarty was too busy dashing by himself to do a great deal of talking and so Billy McCarney monopolized the conversation.

"What are your plans for the future?" I asked.

"We are going to fight all comers," replied McCarney. "I will match the matches and Luther will score 'em away as fast as they come. His first bout will be with Jim Flynn, in Philadelphia, and will take place on April 10

After we get through with Flynn, we will be ready to talk business with the rest of the white heavyweights. I have several tempting offers from Pittsburgh, Salt Lake City, Butte and from that part I prefer fighting for Tom McArdes at Vernon. Tom was our friend when we needed one and we do not intend to forget him now that we have the championship prospects."

Sure He Can Beat Johnson.

"McCarty and myself have been lauded for not fighting in New York, but the critics in the big city hammer us as much as they will. We can get along without their support. There are other cities just as great as New York. In fact, I won't rather own a ball here in Boston any time in preference to New York."

"Will you match McCarty to Little Johnson?" I asked, was the last question I fired at McCarney.

The boss stopped in the cafe. McCarty ceased dancing. At the mention of Johnson's name a wise gleat illuminated his face. He stepped nearer, McCarney and before the latter was able to answer McCarty said in a low, serious tone, as though he had carefully thought out every word he uttered beforehand:

"I will fight Johnson any time the public and the press demands me to do so. And I will beat him, too." McCarty's jaw snapped. There was a look of determination in his every feature.

"Johnson's day has gone by," continued McCarty. "He is a physical wreck and I know that I am his master. He is going down hill. I caught at first place. Watch me I am improving daily. A year ago I was a novice. Now I am a real fighter. I have made a study of the game and I know I could beat any man on the Johnson books in a go. This is not boasting talk either. I hope I will not be accused of making it's nothing but."

It was then time for McCarty to start for the theatre and I accompanied him to the Modern picture. He was featured during his early career as a cowboy on the Western plains. He was shown riding his fleet-footed horse and hunting in the mountains. Last, however, I left of the quiet life on the ranch and starts out in the world to make his fortune. He found the globe and finally met Billy McCarney at Springfield, Mo., and the latter has made him a champion boxer. McCarty's trials as an adventurer, beating his way across the country, are interesting.

The champion gave a fine exhibition. He was first pitted against George Perry, the West End heavyweight.

"I will not hurt you," said McCarty before the bout.

"Oh you needn't mind" replied Perry "I can go a few. I have won many white wope tournaments and I guess I can last three rounds at least, and so you need not worry over your share of the purse."

The bell sounded. McCarty sharped off. He moved about the stage with the speed of a lightweight and showed remarkable cleverness. He reminded one of Mickey Melody in his palmy days.

Bang! Bang! McCarty landed two short, snappy punches. Neither of them was worked over forty inches before they reached their mark. But they were full of power. McCarty's massive shoulders

Perry crumpled and fell in the floor of the stage. He was completely exhausted. The bout was stopped and Jeff Madden was brought forward. He lasted two rounds with McCarty, but Luther handled him with gloved hands as he had a friendly knocked him out in the afternoon. Perry after lasted a short round with McCarty and he, too, was completed with a speech by McCarty.

McCarney says he battery is capable of defeating South, Willard and the rest of the "white hopes." His words have a ring of sincerity. I believe that the black spot in the history of the boxing game caused by the Reno comedy will soon be wiped out. And who is better fitted to perform the task than this courageous young giant, who is but a mere boy in age and experience?

60 Candidates Out for Baseball Team at Mechanic Arts

Sixty youthful baseball stars are candidates for positions on Mechanic Arts baseball nine. Bill Mathews, the old Harvard star, has charge of the squad

For a while it looked as if the team would be without a coach, but the return of Mathews is sufficient proof to cause one to think that the Boxful y would have a fast nine.

Besides Captain Dempsey, there are six veterans back, including Lally, Monadlee, Morgan, Sloo and Moulton. Among the promising new men are Hardy, Pupey, Cat Sterkin and W. K. Moulton, Jr., Man.

THOMAS NAMES MORIARITY AS BEST MOOCHER

"I consider Moriarity the trickiest baserunner in the country. When he is on base you can't relax vigilance a second. If he got on the paths as often as Cobb, Milan and Collins, but if you asked me what base-runners I favored most vigilantly, I would quickly name George Moriarity and Jimmy Callahan

"I consider Moriarity the trickiest baserunner in the country. When he is on base you can't relax vigilance a second. If he got on the paths as often as Cobb, Milan and Collins, but if you I believe he would steal a hundred bases a season. I don't think there is a more artistic pilferer. Moriarity is considered a fast man, but he is nowhere near Cobb, Milan and Collins for speed, so that makes his dazzling performances all the more wonderful. He has the audacity to try anything. He gets a bigger lead on a pitcher than any player I know of. He works away from the base inch by inch and then bolts ahead. He seems to get top speed in a half second, and always slides into the bag at a point furthest from the man taking the ball

The House on the Marsh

A CELEBRATED NOVEL BY FLORENCE WARDEN

PART I.

"I'M that glad, miss, I could dance," said she. "She said Mr. Rayner and her fell downstairs in the dark, and went on it, and took no notice—and she rests, is a good deal bruised, and serves her right. But there a no believing Sarah. And for her to talk about goings on! Oh, my, we did look, cook and me!"

And Jane dashed on about Sarah and her many unpleasant attributes till she had finished her work, and left the room with a huge frown of friendship.

Mr. Rayner came in when I knocked and got up, and met me in an arm chair by the fire, and asked me to walk while he smoked a cigar. He met the room, and I cautiously made friends with his big dog, who shared the hearth rug with me. He was very gracious and I had progressed so far as to ride down from my seat to caress him faster when I looked up and saw Sarah.

I sprang to my feet with a scream that I could have prevented had I tried.

"Don't be silly, child," said Mr. Rayner, rising more leisurely. "I am afraid I startled you. Mrs. Rayner will be here in a minute to welcome you for long." And he left the room.

I need hardly say that I did not mean to stay there a minute longer than I could help, and I didn't want to be left alone either. What should I say if I found a bit of paper for? You see, I knew what it was. I only wanted to read it. I'm not a curious person, and I don't think, as a rule, I am what you would call inquisitive. But I'm only human, and I do want to know what I'm up against. The writing on the envelope was addressed, and I couldn't take her letter, but I could take the letter. I'd have put it back. I'm sorry I frightened you. I've come to ask you to forgive me."

She said it in a dry, hard tone, but as if she really repented her cruel action a bit.

"Oh no, I can't forgive you—at least not yet," I said, incoherently. "It wasn't only wanting to steal my letter and to frighten me, but the way you looked at me, the cruel way—as if you would have liked to kill me," I said, growing more excited as I remembered the terrible glare of her eyes when she sprung at me the second time. "I can't forget it—Oh, I can't forget it! And you did something worse than that. You told the cook and Jane that Mr. Rayner was coming up to my room. Oh, that was wicked of you, for you knew it wasn't true!"

Accuses Jane of Tattling

"That's that little tattler Jane, I know," said Sarah, vixenishly. "I never said such a thing at all, but she likes to make a story up of everything she hears. You know what a chatterbox she is, miss."

I did know it; but I did not think Jane was likely to have uttered such a base untruth. I was silent for a minute. Sarah began again in a different tone.

"You're very hard on a poor servant, Miss Christie, and it isn't generous of you. I don't deny that I was jealous of you, and that I wanted to prove to Mr. Rayner that you had letters on the sly from a young gentleman. There now—I've made a clean breast of it, but don't it seem hard that I, who's served him and his well for nigh seven years, should have to go just at the word of a new lady who hasn't been here two months?"

"It isn't at my word, Sarah. I have had nothing to do with it."

"Nothing to do with it? Can you deny that you dislike me?"

"I should never have disliked you had you not over and over again shown that you hated me, and that it was distasteful to you even to have to serve me. And, as to your going, I only heard what I said this morning through passing Jane's way as she was doing my room."

I blushed as I said false; but I could not confess to Sarah that I had first heard of her departure when I was listening outside the door in this very room on the night before.

"Then you don't want me to go away?"

"It doesn't matter to me whether you go or stay, as I have packed my boxes and am going back to London myself this very afternoon."

Sarah stared. Then she gave a disagreeable laugh.

"You won't go," said she.

"You can go, however, and look at my boxes," said I, indignantly.

"Have you spoken about it to Mr. Rayner yet, miss? I was, miss," said she drily.

"Not yet, but I am going to tell him this morning."

"Let me know if you mind, before you do miss"—she laid a peculiar emphasis on these words—"asking Mr. Rayner to one stay? It won't matter to you, you see, but it's more to me than I can tell."

Real Emotion

And for the first time during the interview there was real emotion in her voice.

"But what I might say wouldn't make any difference, Sarah," I remonstrated gently. "You overrate my importance in this household in the strongest way. My words haven't half the weight with Mr. Rayner that yours have." Sarah looked at me eagerly as I said this, but she did not seem satisfied. "That is the truth and natural, as you have been here so long and are so well thought of."

She did not like me saying that, I saw, by the tightening of her thin lips; but I certainly had not meant to offend her. However, after a minute's pause she said again:

"Then, as you won't be afraid of your word having any effect, miss, perhaps you will the less mind asking Mr. Rayner to let me stay?"

I shrugged my shoulders at her strange persistency. My words would certainly make no difference, and, as I was going away, she would have her way, so I said:

"Very well. I will ask him."

"You promise, miss?" said she, with a strange light in her eyes. "Gentlefolks like you don't break their word, I know," she went on quickly. "If you'll only say 'I promise,' I shall know I can trust you and that you bear no malice."

She must, indeed, be in a hurry to obtain what she asked when she could stoop so far as to cling to me with "gentlefolk."

"I promise," said I.

She might have shown a little gratitude for what she had got, and been glad to get, I thought, but as soon as the words had left my lips she turned proudly on her heel, her figure in attitude triumphantly and with a simple, cold "Thank you, miss," left the room.

Then I felt as if the study had suddenly grown lighter. And nothing about Sarah's visit and nothing about my own departure until after I had made the very little there was to do in settling the accounts of the penny bank. This work had been only an excuse for giving me a holiday, because I looked ill, I felt sure, when I was at work. And then I was relegated to the success of my intercession. Sarah was to let Jane go as much as possible just at first.

But later in the day it was not pleasant to see Sarah answering smile, as she said, when she heard I was going to stay: "I told you so, miss."

And when I said to her, "I kept my promise and asked Mr Rayner for you to stay, Sarah," she answered, "Then I am to stay, of course, Miss?" in the same tone, and I was reluctantly obliged to admit that she was.

And as I looked at her face, which could never seem to me again to look anything but evil, a sudden horror seized me, and I thought that I had pledged myself to stay for five whole weeks in the same house with this woman.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

It's Love, Love, Love!

By FRANCES T. GARSIDE

THEY always speak of it as love's young dream, because it so rarely lives to be old.

• • •

An engagement is like tomorrow, but marriage is like today.

• • •

Introduces wisdom into a love affair, and you wreck it.

• • •

Two important ways for a woman to avoid disappointment are never to fall in love, or put anything in the oven.

• • •

The reason the love-making on the stage is so perfect is that he knows he will not have to pay for the clothes and groceries after the curtain falls.

• • •

It doesn't take much to begin a romance, but there is often a wreck at the stopping place.

• • •

Love makes the world go 'round, but it takes jealousy to make it move lively.

• • •

A popular song has this refrain, "I don't know why I love you, but I do." Don't try to discover the why of loving. Trying to find out why one loves results as tragically as punching a hole in a drum to see what makes the noise.

• • •

Probably one reason the birds are so happy is that they don't have to be married to the same bird longer than one season.

• • •

Love is often largely a matter of nothing else going on.

Gypsy Call

By JEAN BROOKE BURT

GYPSY wind, gypsy wind, over the hills
Always on the lure o' the trail,
Gypsy wind, gypsy wind, follow my dream
To the Country of Lovers Never Fail.
Follow it, follow it, Will o' the Wisp,
And hurry away to the land
Where fairies and flowers and thistle-downs speak
In a way I would fain understand.

Gypsy wind, gypsy wind, play in the hair
Of a dear little maid whom I know.
And whisper her secrets I manage to you
And tell her the reason I go.
Tell her, oh, tell her, wise Summer wind,
Though I go to the end of the trail
My dear little maid will call me from there
To her country of Love-Never-Fail.

Young Folk Will Have Chance to Dance at New Elizabeth Peabody House Every Evening but Sunday

Mrs. Eva Whiting White, head worker of the Elizabeth Peabody House settlement, who says that nothing can supplant dancing, and who believes that young people should have opportunity for its enjoyment, surrounded by proper safeguards.

DANCING is to figur largely in the new Elizabeth Peabody House bearing completion on Charles street.

Mrs. Eva Whiting White, headworker of the settlement, says that she intends to have a ball for dancing open every evening in the week except Sunday.

"I am a thorough believer in dancing," asserts Mrs. White, "and I believe it is the natural outlet for youthful emotions.

"The fact is, I never know anyone between the ages of fourteen and twenty-one who did not like to dance. Girls and boys who work in factories or shops all day find in the dance and the music that accompanies it actual rest from physical labor."

Mrs. White has been one of the pioneers of the public school dances that have been running so successfully in the hall of the Washington school in the West End, and the opportunities she has had for studying dancing have been large. When asked for her candid opinion of the school-house dances she said:

"Up to the present time they have reached a high standard and the success and popularity they have achieved have been due to the fact that the most careful supervision has been given. The hours have been reasonable and no objectionable dancing has been tolerated. The couples have necessarily had to be limited and tickets given out through the evening school. The young people have been most enthusiastic and grateful for this opportunity offered by the city of Boston for dancing in her proper surroundings with sufficient dignity and ceremony to prevent rowdyishness.

Aware of Danger

"I am a great believer in ceremony," continued Mrs. White, "and the more of it there is with children and young people the less apt are they to become rough and unrestrained in their dancing."

While the director of the Elizabeth Peabody House thoroughly believes in dancing, she has equally strong opinions about its dangers and the influences of dance halls.

"Like many other good things," she says, "dancing is capable of serious abuse, and there are dance halls in the city of Boston today which are a disgrace to the community. Some of the modern steps are peculiarly adapted to arouse the wild passions of young people; they become dance mad and with music that few can resist, such as goes with the one-step or turkey trot, couples forget everything but the joy of the wild steps. I understand the situation perfectly and feel therefore the great need of surrounding the dance with every possible safeguard.

"One great difficulty with the amusements of the present day is that the older people and the parents do not sympathize and enter into the good times with the young people as they should. We ought not to stand aloof and criticise from a distance. We should be on hand to applaud and commend, when dancing and entertainments are what they should be. Parents ought not to go where their children are, with the spirit of critics and censors, but they should be there for the enjoyment they get out of it. Their presence is quite sufficient to insure responsibility.

Will Invite Parents

"In my own Elizabeth Peabody dance hall, which will soon be completed, I shall make it a point to invite the parents at all times and they will be as welcome to drop in and see what is going on as will the boys and girls to take part in the dance."

In explaining why she is to give such prominence to dancing Mrs. White said:

"Nothing can compete with dancing and any attempt to abolish it will meet with failure. The restraint that young people feel in the shops, the stores, factories and schools can largely be put aside, and they can give themselves up to a sportsmanlike abandonment and freedom of motion that is really a safeguard when properly directed and not allowed to grow into excess."

As for the best kind of dances, Mrs. White declares for the waltz. "It is the poetry of motion and more graceful than all the rest. It will, in my opinion, never be entirely replaced by the new and more or less uncouth dances that are in vogue at the present time.

The Social Calendar

THE farewell bachelor dinner of Bayard Warren, who on April 8 weds Miss Elizabeth Seeley, will prove one of the real social events of its kind. The function takes place at the Copley Plaza tomorrow and some of the best-known of the city's social bachelors will be present.

The Twentieth Century Club will tomorrow be a centre for two interesting events. At 1 p. m. in the Red, James A. Francis and Mrs. George W. Coleman will tell of some of the recent activities of the Mormons. Leaders of New York settlements here in connection are expected to be present and may take part as speakers. It is also arranged that Herr Nahum Sokolow of Berlin, the noted Zionist, who recently left this country today, shall speak before the club on the same subject.

The Misses Bertha Hadaway and Marguerite Bartlett are arranging for the au pair card party of the Monday Club of Malden, which takes place tomorrow in the hall of the Pratt Building.

Alumni of the 1904 class of the English High School will gather to attend the annual festivities of that body in the Copley Plaza Hotel at 6.30 p. m.

An exhibition which still continues to draw largely from the ranks of society and color.

How Other Nations Train and Pay Their "Finest"

THE work of "getting on the force" in European countries is a more difficult matter than it is in our land and does not go, as sometimes here, on the strength of a political pull. As the foreign policeman has to go to school to learn his duties.

In France and Russia, for instance, academies for the higher training of police have been established, with the result that the detective forces secures many excellent men from the rank and file.

The first stage toward the making of a policeman in England is to teach him a little drill, after which he is taught how to patrol his beat. A small blue book of duty blind-folded form be given to him to study, while he is specially coached in his responsibilities regarding the power of arrest and the limitation of his powers.

The recruit must devote at least four weeks to this instruction. Then he is taught something of the practical side of a policeman's life by being sent to a police court for two hours in the morning to study the rules of evidence and how to give it, or he may be sent to a police station to remain in the charge room in order to hear the charges brought in and to learn what is required of him.

Again, he may be handed over to an experienced constable to be coached around the beat and so learn the routine duties in the evening he may be sent to continue his classes for general education and familiarity, to learn ambulance work and the best way of rendering first aid in case of accident or illness.

His pay as an ordinary constable is from $7 to $10 a week. When he attains the rank of sergeant his pay ranges from $11 to $14, while, should he become an inspector, he will be paid from $15.50 to $27.00. A superintendent, it might be mentioned, receives $1,700 to $2,250 a year.

In France the ordinary Paris policeman begins his career with a salary of $480 and rises to $680 a year, plus about $45 per annum for what is known as "lodging indemnity."

In Berlin, Petersburg policeman's highest pay is $225 a month, while the Berlin police receive from $300 to $400 a year, and an allowance of $60 for quarters.

Training for a German policeman may be said to be the most arduous of any, for, in addition to the lessons in the police school, he is taught in the most up-to-date methods of dealing with criminals.

One of the methods of instruction is like that used by exhibitors of automatic football-players practising. A heavy standing on a rope is set swinging, and the policeman has to run to meet it as it swings towards him and stop it dead. This is practice in learning how to deal with the rush of a crowd. He is also instructed in a hundred and one different manners which make it necessary for him to always have his wits about him, for it must be understood that he has a multitude of duties when compared with the police of other countries.

As one writer in Berlin put it, "The police have a nose in almost everything. When you go to Berlin you are reported to the police, and no stranger can get in or out of the country, and no visitor can come or go without leaving a record of his visit."

The French gendarme's training is also of a very minute character, and the finished standard, is not turned out under a year or eight months.

Not only does he have to study the general routine of his superiors to write reports of incidents accurately as a glimpse of a scaffolding, collisions between vehicles, persons being arrested or injured and of fires and the like; and to enable him to be technically correct he is instructed in the laws relating to the mechanism of motors and motor trains and so on.

He is taught to neglect no details in his reports, and his account of an accident or fight, for instance, will be punctuated with encircled numbers, each number representing an interview of some particular kind, and every link is given in detail at the end of the report.

BEAUTY HINTS

Superfluous Hair.

Will you tell me if there is any way to permanently destroy a disfiguring growth of hair on one on my face and arms? I am 45 years old and have had the growth since my daughter, who is 22, is similarly troubled. I have been told that depilatories are useless and that nothing is effective except the electric needle, which I positively refuse to let any one use on me. I should be glad if you will give me your advice.—LOTTIE.

You are wise to avoid the electric needle by all means. Depilatories, including those I have myself stated in these columns that it is safer to endure the annoyance than to suffer the pain of the electric needle. I have also warned frequently against the use of wax, as worse than useless because they cause the hair to grow out thicker than before.

Recently, however I have received some notice and much valuable information which has come originally in Japan, which has been successfully used by a friend of mine in this city. I am a correspondent of hers, and she has written a complete form by its use, and me that I will gladly furnish full particulars, without cost or charge to anyone who would write her. You may write to Mrs. Dagnell, Suite 11 K 118 East 25th St., New York City, enclosing a two cent stamp for reply and mentioning my advice, she will send you, quite free of all cost, particulars of a treatment which has undoubtedly enabled her to permanently rid herself of the hair.—BEAUTY EXPERT.

FRECKLES

February and March Worst Months for This Trouble—How to Remove Easily.

There's a reason why nearly everybody freckles in February and March, but happily there is also a remedy for these ugly blemishes, and no one need stay freckled.

Simply get an ounce of othine, double strength, from any of the Riker-Jaynes Drug Stores and apply a little of it night and morning, and in a few days you should see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the light ones have vanished entirely. Now is the time to rid yourself of freckles, for if not removed now they may stay all Summer, and spoil an otherwise beautiful complexion. Your money back if othine fails.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

Ma told Pa almost a year ago that she would never ask any more of them club ladies up to the house. Ma kep her word 'till last night, which is longer than Pa kep his word on any promise he made to her.

Dearest luv and Ma I have a surprise in store for you tonight. I'm going to entertane six of the most butiful wimmen that you have ever saw. I do not mean, Ma, sed, that they are butiful in face and form, but I do mean that they have wonderful intellecks. Pa's face got kinda long. Isn't thare one of the six that has a butiful face sed Pa? No sed Ma. Well sed Pa, isn't there one of the six that has a butiful form? You might not think so sed Ma. I cud see that Ma was getting kinda peevish.

The newspaper artists & speshul writers is going to have a banquet to-nite sed Pa and wanted me to be sure to come. They have got a seat reserved for Tom Fowers and me. Mr. Fowers is going to be the gloom and I am going to be the joy, bekaus I have a round fat face Pa sed. The boys thought that would be a fine table. I gess I will leave at eight o'clock Pa sed, if that will be all right.

Ma began to grin at Pa kinda meen. You have got a fat chanst Me sed to put your foot outside this door this eve. You don't seem to realize that I am going to entertain the Roman Reginas. What is Reginas sed Pa? Reginas is queens in latin sed Ma, and it would be a direct insult to them six lovly wimmen if my husband wunn't here to help me receive them.

Spout Latin Poetry?

Well, sed Pa, what is the program? I supposa they are going to spout Latin potry all the evening. No, sed Ma, but they are going into sum of the decisils of the rise and fall of Anshent Rome. One of the ladies was in Rome ont on a Cook's Tourr & seen the bridge which Mr. Horatius held. Another of the ladies was also in Rome and she seen the knife that Casca used on Julius Caesar. It will be a very interesting evening, all in all, sed Ma, and I am shure you will not regret staying at home tonight. Now go and put on your evening close Ma sed and Bobbie will help you find your shirt studs.

When Pa & me was in the next room, Pa looked at me kinda mad and sed, Well Bobbie, when do you expect to walk up the isle. Just think, Pa sed, of a full-grown man that cud be having a grate swoshun with the artists and writers, every one of them a speed boy, being cooped up here all the evening with seven Roman Reginas, including your queen Mother. Take it from me, Robbie, sed Pa, that they will find me a kind of a bull in the china shop this evning, when they begin talking of the rise and fall of Rome. Jest watch me, that's all, sed Pa. Your Ma gave me her word that thar would be no more wimmin clubs in the house & I guess after tonight she will keep it forever.

After we had our dinner the Roman Reginas all came. Ma sed the truth when she sed they were butiful except in face and form. Pa got in his Morris Chair over in the corner after he had bin interduced & I set neer him waiting for the show to begin.

A Poem on Nero

We will first hear sed Ma from the talented young poetis Miss Anabel Anne. She has prepared a butiful poem about the monster Nero who drenched all Rome in blood Ma sed, and fiddeled when the Town was burning down.

Then Miss Anne got up and recited:

'Cruelty, thy name is Nero, Long ago
Much blood and anguish thou didst make the world so.
Brave gladiators when their limbs grew sons,
Looked up at thee & thou turned down thy thum.
Thou tyrant who didst spurn each sacred law
Thou wast the wurst the world ever saw."

Wonderful sed all of the other Roman Reginas. Don't you think so said one of them turning to Pa.

I think it is an awful lot of tripe myself sed Pa. Let me recite you a little poem Pa sed, which I composed this midit:

Mark Antony was quite a gent,
His fame did not diminish
Till Cleopatra came along
& trimmed him to a finish.

Ma glared at Pa awful hard. You are very im-pertinent she said. We have several beautiful poems to hear from members of our club and you might at least be a fair audience.

Wait til I finish my verse sed Pa
But Cleo wasn't satisfied
When Marc was on the shelf;
She went and bought a little snake
And then got stung herself.

Then Pa got up and yawned. I have a awful pain over my right eye, he sed, and I think it is hurtly, I'm sure you ladies will excuse my little son and myself 'till we skip over to the drug store. Then Pa and me skipped over to the drug store, but we didn't skip back.

How to Dance the Tango

Pictures posed by Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle at Campbell Studios

The shoulders and upper part of the body are held very straight and stiff

The downward dip

The open position going forward. Position of foot during knee twist

If you can dance the two-step, and, above all, if you have a good sense of rhythm, the tango is one of the easiest of the new dances.

It is not the old tango of the stage, which was nothing less than an acrobatic performance, but it is a pretty, easy and graceful dance, and as everybody's doing it Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle were asked especially to show just how tango is done for the readers of this paper.

"In the first place," said Mr. Castle, "the upper part of the body must be held perfectly straight. The shoulders must be squared—a man should be able to balance a penny on them. There is none of that graceful bending of the shoulders. The shoulders and the body are held as in the old-fashioned cake walk."

"And in the next place the man must know how to guide," insisted dainty Mrs. Castle, "and his hold must be firm and yet loose enough so that the lady can move easily to the side positions."

The peculiar dip or turn of the door that makes the tango what it is, a foreign and fantastic dance, is done by twisting the leg from the knee down. There is no swaying of the body, for the drawing room tango is quite a stiff and proper affair compared to the tango of yesteryear.

At every fourth step the dancers bend or rather turn the knee. The foot is turned, too, the heel turning outward, as the toe remains on the floor and the heel is lifted to make the turn decided. The dancers begin with the two-step and dip and bend, in the regular manner, holding each other in the ordinary way. After the dip on the fourth bar of the music they change position slightly, both dancing forward as in the illustration and stopping on opposite feet, that is, the man on his left, the girl on the right foot. This brings the two feet close together and would not seem to work out right, but it does. Dance forward and turn, dip and turn the foot at the fourth beat. Where regular tango music is played there is a slight pause at every fourth bar which the dancers fill out by a dip.

If one were toeing in, the toe remains on the floor and the heel is lifted to make the turn decided. The dancers begin with the two-step and dip and bend, in the regular manner, holding each other in the ordinary way. After the dip on the fourth bar of the music they change position slightly, both dancing forward as in the illustration and stopping on opposite feet, that is, the man on his left, the girl on the right foot. This brings the two feet close together and would not seem to work out right, but it does. Dance forward and turn, dip and turn the foot at the fourth beat. Where regular tango music is played there is a slight pause at every fourth bar which the dancers fill out by a dip.

The body must be carried very erect, head high. There is none of the swaying that made the Tango Argentino so objectionable.

The steps can be done forward, back, to the side and in open position forward, but always with the dip and turn of the knee. Almost every couple have some variation of their own, dancing the tango without touching, the girl with her arms extended, the man with his behind him, but always in perfect rhythm.

In dancing forward in open position the step must be of precisely the same length and the turn of the knee done at the same time and with the same amount of force. That is the whole trick in a dance that looks more complicated than it really is.

Hunting a Husband

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

Until morning after Keith Lacy's declaration of affection for Beatrice Minor, Helen Robbins came to her friend's room at half-past seven.

"Good morning, dear!" she said, bending over the widow and kissing her affectionately. "Did you sleep well?"

"Pretty well," replied Beatrice. "But then I am going away I always wake up early and get nervous about the preparations for departure."

"Well," said her hostess, sitting down aside her, "there is nothing to be nervous bout this morning. John is not going nto town until the 10 o'clock train, and fary and the children can go in with him. ell, when they get to Boston, he will end them up to your apartment in a taxi. hat will be his treat to the kids," she dded with a smile.

Tears of gratitude sprang to Beatrice's eyes. "Oh, Helen!" she exclaimed, "how good you all are to me! And I have never done a thing for any of you!"

Her friend kissed her again, impulsively. "Yes, you have, Honey," she said softly. "I had a talk with my dear brother last night and he told me you had made him very happy. And that has made me happy, Beatrice, for I love him and you."

Color Returns

The widow flushed a vivid crimson.

"Oh, Helen," she stammered, "I did not make any promise to Keith, for I am so confused by all that has happened lately that I can't decide anything. Besides, he doesn't know me well yet. When he does, he may change his mind."

Helen patted her hand soothingly. "I know all about it, dear," she assured her, "for Keith explained the situation to me. But he hopes to make you love him. I reminded him that he had seen few nice women since he lived on a ranch and that perhaps his head was slightly turned by your sweetness, but (with a little laugh) he says he is sure of himself and that he has loved you from the first moment he saw you."

"I hope he will not be disappointed in me," said Beatrice.

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Helen. "And now get up, dear, for Keith is waiting downstairs for you to come to breakfast. And we want you down there, too."

"And I want to come," said Beatrice as Helen left her.

She made her toilette in a leisurely manner and with much care. In her mind was the thought of the man below stairs who would look at her with a foretaste of possession, and this added pleasure to her preparations. She donned a skirt and shirtwaist belonging to Helen—as her own dresses had been burned in the bungalow fire. Helen had altered this costume to fit her friend. The widow was glad, when she looked in the glass to note that the old-time color was returning to her cheeks, that her eyes were no longer dull, and that the weary lines were disappearing.

Even if she was no longer young, she said to herself, she was still attractive. She smiled at her reflection in the mirror and noted how the gleam lighted her whole face. Yes, she was almost satisfied this morning. Perhaps, after all, she was going to forget things she did not want to remember.

The "chug chug" of a motor car drew her to the window just as she had completed her toilette. A large, long-bodied, covered car was drawing up at the front door below.

"It looks like—an ambulance," she muttered in horror.

Her door was suddenly opened and Helen Robbins hurried in.

"Oh, Beatrice, dear," she said nervously, "I've been thinking that, perhaps, after all, you would better let me send your breakfast up to you this morning. Dear, don't look out of the window—please!"

Must Go at Once

Her friend's agitation had the effect of making the widow suddenly calm and cold.

"Why?" she asked sternly. "What are you trying to keep from me? Why should I not come downstairs I have seen that—thing—out there," pointing to the motor car below. "What is it?"

"It is an ambulance from the hospital to take Paul Maynard away," Helen hastened to explain, seeing that concealment was useless.

"Dr. Yeager made arrangements last night to have it come out this morning early, and telephoned to John of it, but John didn't tell me until just now, for he thought it would make me nervous. Dr. Yeager and Dr. Haynes and two other men brought here for the purpose are going to carry Paul downstairs."

"I see," said Beatrice, coldcriesly. Her face seemed suddenly turned to stone, so hard and gray had it become. How he—Mr. Maynard?"

"Oh, suffering, of course. But the specialist and Dr. Yeager think that he may get on all right in the hospital. But he must go at once. Dear"—putting her arm about her friend—"I hear John calling for me, and I must run and see what he wants. But grounder me that you will stay right here until I come back and that you will remain calm—please, dear!"

"Very well," said Beatrice, still calmly. "Go! John is calling you again!"

She stood motionless where her friend had left her. She could hear the steps of men coming slowly down the stairs from the floor above her. She knew what burden they carried. Suddenly she darted forward and softly opened the door of her room. They must pass here in a minute.

The boarders were too much engrossed in their task to observe the figure that appeared in the doorway as they passed. She was there only a moment, but in that instant she had seen the blanketed and prostrate form on the stretcher carried by the four men. She saw the bandaged face. As the bearers disappeared with their burden at a turn in the hall she stretched out her arms toward the swathed form with a sudden, uncontrollable passion—was it of pity or love?

"Oh, she gasped with a sob that brought no tears—oh, if it were only I! If it were only I instead! I cannot, cannot bear it!"

And, closing the door swiftly, she threw herself with a moan on her bed and buried her face in the pillows.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

YOU HAVE HER WORD.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a girl of nineteen. The other night she told my friends she loved me, but as I cannot tell if she loves me, could you let me know how to find out?

W. S.

You love her; she has told a friend she loves you. It is pleasanter to learn such things first hand, to go to her and ask her direct if you feel that you must know. But she is only sixteen, and too young to really know.

IT IS SAFER TO WAIT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a young lady, and want to marry her. But as I am getting only $12 a week I am quite undecided whether to ask the young lady to wait or get married.

PERCY A.

You might live on $12 a week, but love wouldn't.

Don't get married until you are earning twice as much.

A Couple of Idiots

"Jimmie," said the merchant, solemnly, at the eleventh hour, "we have forgotten to get a fresh supply of stamps."

And the office boy, in his excitement, responded with, "Goodness, sir, so we have! If we ain't a couple of blunderheaded idiots!"

The Factory Clock

"Talk about your long hours, I know a couple of hands in a factory that never stop day or night all the year round."

"Impossible! Where?"

"On the factory clock."

The Food-Drink

A cup of Huyler's Cocoa satisfies your desire for a delicious drink that helps instead of harms digestion. It is the beverage of the healthy man, woman and child who wants warmth and food rather than stimulation.

Its delicate flavor, due to Huyler's own blend of cocoa beans—grown in different countries under different conditions—makes it a favorite.

Forbes Discusses Disaster and Its Effect on Finances

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

The disaster's effect upon our financial centres will be less serious than is apt, in the first flush of so much legitimate excitement, to be imagined. Security markets had already been subjected to one depressing influence after another, both at home and abroad, and values were at or near the lowest point in recent years. It was the late Edward H. Harriman who once remarked that after you had come down many stories you could not fall so very far. That is the position today—the stock market has come down quite a few stories.

Selling of a quarter of a billion of investments by European and American insurance companies followed the San Francisco disaster and caused heavy declines in prices, but nothing of the kind will attend this latest calamity. The losses of insurance companies will be comparatively unimportant.

The physical devastation will in all probability prove of much less extent than now gauged, for, surrounded by ruin and roaring floods, estimators are apt to draw the blackest of deductions and thus, in some degree, counteract the material effect of the disaster.

A thrill of pride must have coursed through every American who read yesterday's story of the kindly and sympathetic way which the nation's machinery for succoring the needy was set in motion. From the President, who ordered the army to start for the scene of havoc at a moment's notice should its presence be of any avail, all the way down through the War Department, the Department of Public Health, the society's great railroad systems, its express companies, its big stores, as well as its State authorities, its many medical and charitable organizations and its private citizens, each and all, with clock-like precision, instantaneously bestirred themselves to forward every possible aid.

One eruption of Nature makes the world ills.

The calm which prevailed on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday was at once gratifying and significant. It meant that the largest holders of securities had no desire to add to the grievousness of the situation by precipitating a debacle in investments, and it suggested, also, that most securities are now resting on bedrock. At such a crisis it were inspiring to see patriotism put above speculative profits.

grow bumper crops. In modified measure the same result will be experienced in the areas which have been temporarily laid under water.

The railroads will suffer more than any other single industry. Not only has traffic been interrupted, entailing loss of earnings, but costly bridges have been swept away, many embankments have occurred and lengthy stretches of railroad have been rendered unfit for immediate use. The railroads had little need of such a visitation, for their financial condition was already none too encouraging. To repair the waste and ruin millions will be requisite, and fresh borrowing will have to be essayed. However, the ability of American railroad engineers to repair damage to bridges and track at lightening speed is nothing short of marvellous. The great task undoubtedly will be performed in much shorter time than the layman can conceive.

Mankind's response to the needs of the stricken brothers will be so generous that the work of rebuilding homes, rehabilitating cities and resuming occupations will be undertaking forthwith and pushed forward with all dispatch. The spending on the vast sums available will tend to quicken certain industries and thus, in some degree, counteract the material effect of the disaster.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

The price trend in stock markets was encouraging this morning, the tone averaging good at the start and many issues advancing. This was regarded as evidence of satisfaction as indicating that liquidation is about over. A rising market in the face of a great catastrophe in this country has some significance.

The Boston market opened with a firm tone. Trading increased a little, but was not very active. At the end of the first hour Granby was 1¼ higher. The price movements for the last at large was narrow.

The New York market was both strong and active. When the morning was half over Amalgamated was up 1⅛, Steel 1⅛, Union Pacific 1⅝, and Reading 1¼. It is that market the belief is growing that something is to develop soon in the Harriman dissolution situation, and that the new plan is near completion, if not already framed.

New York Market Opened Steady.

The New York market opened steady, despite flood news and a realization that large financial losses have fallen upon some railroads and industrial concerns. The most immediate effect of the great disaster is an added strain upon monetary resources.

Most of the speculative interest was centred upon Union Pacific, which rose ⅝ to 149¾, and Reading, which advanced ⅝ to 158¼. Canadian Pacific, which was strong in London, was bought here for a gain of 2¾ at the opening. This carried the quotation to 234. Among other advances were Amalgamated, ¼; American Smelting, ¼; American Telephone, ½; Anaconda, ¼; Westinghouse, 1; Steel, ⅛; Northern Pacific, ⅜, and Steel, ⅛.

The declines included Pennsylvania ⅛, Chino ⅛ and American Can ¼. The Curb was dull and easy.

The market situation in general seems such as to preclude a large volume of business and a wide price fluctuation. Facts regarding the flood losses are needed before commitments on any scale can be looked for.

Undertone Good in London.

American stocks in London were hesitant and nervous because of uncertainty on the part of traders as to the extent of damage suffered by railroads in the Middle West. The upward movement for Canadian Pacific was resumed. The undertone of the market was good and the pre-Easter settlement was concluded smoothly. The market recovered from the reaction due to profit taking in the forenoon.

President Advised on Tariff.

The Cabinet, it is understood, is now considering the message on the tariff which President Wilson will send to Congress on April 1, and it may reflect to a considerable degree the views of Secretary of Commerce Redfield. The latter was one of Mr. Wilson's advisers during the last campaign, and is regarded in party circles as knowing a great deal on the subject. The President and the Secretary had a long talk over the message at the White House last night.

Urged Clearing House Currency Issue

President James G. Cannon of the Fourth National Bank of New York thinks clearing house associations should be compelled to incorporate and be put under Treasury Department supervision, as some abuse their powers. He also says clearing houses should be utilized as an important aid in currency revision. No less than $236,189,000 Clearing House loan certificates were issued during the 1907 panic, of which were retired later without the loss of a single dollar. He said:

"Extensions of Clearing House activities, whether good or bad in themselves, involve a dangerous exercise of power, unless the whole system is brought under proper governmental regulation. To the undue exercise of power, many of the associations have undoubtedly laid themselves open to criticism.

"I am firmly of the belief, and have been for several years, that in the Clearing House associations of our country we have facilities which can be utilized as a basis upon which we may issue our currency."

What Western Pacific Wants.

After F. W. M. Cureton had conferred with Attorney-General Mc Reynolds in Washington on the demand of the Western Pacific, for which he is general counsel, for equal rights for that road with Union Pacific in regard to privileges granted by Southern Pacific over the Benecia cutoff in California, he said:

"The Western Pacific is seeking only equal privileges and a fair field for all. It is not looking for special privileges. It does not aim to interfere with the rights of any proprietary company, nor does the Pacific retains all its lines in California and grants no traffic privileges the Western Pacific wants no favors. But if Southern Pacific grants traffic privileges to Union Pacific, Pacific, Western Pacific wants equal privileges."

Copper Steady in London.

The London warrants market opened steady with spot copper 1s 6d higher and futures unchanged.

From the first of the month up to last night copper exports totalled 37,321 full tons. Yesterday's exports amounted to 1,000.

Copper producers are of the opinion that the limited supply and increasing demand will bring about an advance in the price of the metal before long. The prevailing rate is 16 cents a pound, and foreign and domestic buying is about equal in amount. The floods in the West will increase the demand for copper products to a considerable extent, and the metal market will soon feel the effects. One prediction is that the next report of the Copper Producers will show a decrease of about 10,000,000 pounds in the stocks in their hands.

Financial News in Brief.

The Peerless Motor Car Company has declared an initial quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on new preferred stock, payable April 1.

The Standard Steamship Company did the largest cabin business in its history last year. This was partly due to the Titanic disaster, which gave it a preference on the part of timid passengers because of the reputation of the line for safety. Its profits for 1912 were $3,920,000, and a 10 per cent dividend was declared on ordinary shares.

The Salem Savings Bank of Salem, Mass., has declared the semi-annual dividends of 2 per cent., payable April 28. On March 24 deposits in the institution amounted to $9,368,131.

Leading steel manufacturers report a heavy resumption of business at their plants in the Mahoning and Shenango valleys because of floods. Freshets and shipments will be greatly curtailed for a number of days. It is reported that the damage to plants has been light. Between 100,000 and 150,000 workmen have been rendered idle.

Proxies for the annual meeting of the United States Steel Corporation to be held April 21 are being solicited in the names of J. P. Morgan, H. C. Frick, E. H. Garry, Norman B. Ream and Robert Winsor. For some months rumors were current that Daniel G. Reid and George W. Perkins would resign as directors, but persons close to the management of the corporation stated yesterday that no changes in the directorate are expected.

The Missouri, Kansas & Texas has purchased half the capital stock of the Houston & Brazos Valley Railroad, a small line running from Anchor, Texas, to Freeport.

Attorney Frank J. Goodi sailed from New York for Europe he intimated that he might become a citizen of France, as "he did not like the way sportsmen were treated under the laws of New York." Paris is his choice.

The New York sub-treasury gained $1,016,000 from banks yesterday and has lost $4,153,000 since Friday.

PANAMA STEAMSHIP WEATHERS STORM

NEW YORK, March 28.—A wireless message received today from Captain Clark of the steamship Advance, of the Panama Railway Steamship Company, states that the vessel is safe and proceeding southward. A wireless 3. 0 o. gent cur by the Advance last night stated that she ran into a gale and needed help. She has about seventy passengers aboard.

IRISH PLAYERS SCORE IN NEW OFFERINGS HERE

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

You may count the day lost—or at least regard it as such—if the Irish Players do not break out in several new plays. If the present engagement at the Plymouth had been turned into an endurance test the dramatic repertoire of the players could not have engaged upon a more gruelling program. Also they would have captured first honors.

The drama of Ireland as promoted and presented by a group of players following Lady Gregory around the country satisfied, of course, upon fresh fields yesterday, beginning with a matinee performance of "The Countess Cathleen" and moving on to "The Land of the Heart's Desire" in the evening. These new plays, however, were but an atom of the day's work, for in the afternoon we relished "The Showing Up of Blanco Posnet," and the evening plunged into four distinct plays. As only one of these, "The Land of the Heart's Desire," was a new bill, the programme in the afternoon and the evening may be safely passed over lightly.

"The Countess Cathleen" was a miracle play by William Butler Yeats, and it was the first of the Irish forces into the work. It was a literary treat if you are familiar or have a leaning toward Irish literature. Incidentally as its qualities were literary rather than dramatic it was rather less interesting than many of the plays these players have already given us, in fact, as in the case of Synge's Playboy, Miss Sara Allgood proved herself a skilful actress—intelligent and convincing.

"The new offering of the evening, "The Land of the Heart's Desire," was a pocketful fantasy that concerned the fairy folk in County of Sligo in a "remote time." In this one not of clever acting you had Miss Ethne Magee as a beautiful fairy. I was not exactly clear what Mr. Yeats, who wrote the piece, is author of its say, was trying to demonstrate, but you were at least convinced that Miss Magee was a fairy who knew how to take care of herself and put one family and a clergyman of the church to rout.

The remaining plays of the evening were J. M. Synge's graphic tragedy, "Riders to the Sea," "Lady Gregory's "The Rising of the Moon," and Lady Gregory's "Spreading the News"—the latter being a comedy of unusual merit and played in rather lively fashion.

The bills for tomorrow evening will be "The Unicorn from the Stars" and "The Showing Up of Blanco Posnet."

The Irish industry of the Irish players will continue unabated for another week.

WHAT IS GOOD TO EAT TODAY IN THE MARKET

Lobsters have never been so scarce in Boston. Usually during the month of March Boston receives thousands of lobsters from Nova Scotia, besides those caught off the New England shores. At present the arrivals are at a very low ebb, and the few that come in are eagerly bought for the high class restaurants and hotels. Boston being the distributing point for the whole country very few of the small number of lobsters arriving from time to time find their way into the hands of the local retail dealers.

Two ships arrived from Nova Scotia yesterday, the Boston from Yarmouth with ninety-nine crates, and the Aramore from Halifax with only one crate. Under normal conditions the Boston would have brought from 700 to 900 crates and the Aramore from 200 to 850 crates. These lobsters sold to the jobbers for thirty-five to forty cents a pound.

The wholesale prices of fish have advanced considerably during the past two or three days, by reason of a falling off in receipts at the wharf. The rise has not greatly affected the retail markets as yet and will not if the conditions change for the better.

Although increasing quantities of butter continue to come into Boston the price does not drop and the holders of butter in quantities are in control of the market. Good table butter continues to sell for thirty-six to forty-five cents a pound at retail, an unusually high price for this season.

Green vegetables are coming into Boston in increasing variety and quantity. There has never been a time when the market has been so plentifully supplied at this season.

Wray Divorce Revealed in Town Topics Libel Suit

NEW YORK, March 28.—The filing of two suits for $100,000 each against Colonel William d' Alton Mann, owner of Town Topics, by ex-Senator Albert A. Wray, a lawyer, reveals that Emma Mann Wray, Colonel Mann's daughter, recently obtained a secret divorce from ex-Senator Wray in New Jersey.

One suit is for alienation of affection. The other asks damages for slander.

WHAT IS GOOD TO EAT TODAY IN THE MARKET

Lobsters have never been so scarce in Boston. Usually during the month of March Boston receives thousands of lobsters from Nova Scotia, besides those caught off the New England shores. At present the arrivals are at a very low ebb, and the few that come in are eagerly bought for the high class restaurants and hotels. Boston being the distributing point for the whole country very few of the small number of lobsters arriving from time to time find their way into the hands of the local retail dealers.

Two ships arrived from Nova Scotia yesterday, the Boston from Yarmouth with ninety-nine crates, and the Aramore from Halifax with only one crate. Under normal conditions the Boston would have brought from 700 to 900 crates and the Aramore from 200 to 850 crates. These lobsters sold to the jobbers for thirty-five to forty cents a pound.

The wholesale prices of fish have advanced considerably during the past two or three days, by reason of a falling off in receipts at the wharf. The rise has not greatly affected the retail markets as yet and will not if the conditions change for the better.

Although increasing quantities of butter continue to come into Boston the price does not drop and the holders of butter in quantities are in control of the market. Good table butter continues to sell for thirty-six to forty-five cents a pound at retail, an unusually high price for this season.

Green vegetables are coming into Boston in increasing variety and quantity. There has never been a time when the market has been so plentifully supplied at this season.

Men Should Think More About the Conquest of Nature

He CAN and Will Conquer Nature and Rule This Earth. But He Must Put His Mind and His Power in the Task, and Meet the Combined Forces of Nature with the Combined Intelligence of Men

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.

Another story of disaster is spread before the nation, one that may be compared with the great Galveston flood, the San Francisco earthquake, or any cataclysm in which Nature shakes the earth, wipes out men and their cities, and for the time laughs at the feeble efforts of the human race.

There are thousands killed, hundreds of thousands homeless, farms, railroads, bridges, reservoirs and highways destroyed, tens of millions of property wiped out.

It is the old story that has been told so often, that was told in the great Lisbon disaster, that was told one thousand times on the earth before men began to write their history.

It will be told again and again, as tidal waves, earthquakes, tornadoes, cyclones and fires come to frighten men and make them feel their littleness—but IN THE END MAN WILL CONQUER NATURE ON THIS PLANET AND RULE THE PLANET AND ITS FORCES ABSOLUTELY.

Progress is slow. Human beings work as separate atoms, each for himself, and it is only when war and murder change the current that we work together.

A million men can be gathered for murder in WAR. But there is no united action of the intellect of men to fight against the real enemy, disorganized nature.

Yet triumphant organization will come, and in the face of this great disaster that shakes the country, men need not be terrified or discouraged.

They have largely themselves to blame. If they had built that great reservoir in Ohio properly, it would not have burst, inundating a great city.

If they had built their bridges properly, they need not have been swept away.

The army upon which we spend hundreds of millions and the educated officers, upon whose education millions are spent, should be used in studying and dealing with flood problems and reservoir problems, instead of parading and thinking of murder. By army work this flood could have been avoided.

We have made a step in one direction. We have got rid of the superstitious feeling that for centuries accompanied such events.

We no longer believe that this is a visitation of Divine wrath. We don't bow our heads and say that we have deserved it.

Even in the storm we notice that churches and saloons suffer about equally.

And we find that the prison stands strong with the criminals safe, while the orphan asylum blows down and the children are killed.

And therefore we know that this isn't done because a God wants it done—BUT BECAUSE MEN HAVEN'T LEARNED HOW TO PREVENT IT.

We no longer pray to have these things stopped. We make up our minds that WE WILL STOP THEM. And it is time for men to go at it.

If the country can spend two or three hundred millions a year for an army and a navy, keeping ready for an enemy that may come, that same country could spend one thousand millions a year if necessary, CONQUERING THE ENEMY—SAVAGE NATURE—WHICH IS ALWAYS AT WAR WITH US.

The officials of our government have mapped out every inch of our waterways, they have made maps of every hill and valley.

They know just where the danger is. They know where the waters come from that swell the Mississippi, or that make the smaller Ohio rivers overflow.

They know what ought to be done—or they could find out and take charge of those great inundations.

The greatest part of the work must be done by the army of the United States, the army that is able without graft to build the Panama Canal, able to protect the health of the builders, and fight nature, which down there takes the form of disease. That army must do the fighting

This country should have not fifty or one hundred thousand soldiers marching up and down, saluting idle officers, wasting time, waiting for war.

We ought to have five hundred thousand trained men, with the necessary number of highly educated officers—every one an engineer, a road builder, a canal builder, a man understanding draining and ditching, and making reservoirs.

Such an army as that need never be used in war. The mere fact that it existed would make the thought of war impossible in other countries.

Such an army should be well paid, constantly at work, dealing with the problems that are national.

The rivers that are too shallow to carry their waters in sudden floods would be made deeper by such an army and safe.

Natural reservoirs would be created and utilized in times of emergency.

When you look at nature unchained, and flashing lightning and rolling waters man seems a very little and weak thing.

BUT HE IS NOT LITTLE AND HE IS NOT WEAK.

He is a child as yet in development, but he has in his brain the power to conquer every force on this planet.

The lightning that seems so fearful is already harnessed up as a slave. And Niagara, the greatest waterfall in the world, with all its powers, is used to run street cars in Buffalo and Rochester, and operate factories in a hundred places. It obeys.

In the brain of man there is the power to control this entire globe, to map it out, to take care of the surplus water from the rainfall, and, what is more important, TO KEEP THAT WATER AND USE IT ON THE LANDS WITHOUT LETTING IT GO BACK WASTED INTO THE OCEAN.

Man thinks that he does wonderful things—but he is only beginning to feel his way.

A little while ago at Pavia, Italy, a balloon went up into the air a little over twenty-three miles—and that was the record of achievement. In other words man has gone up into the air only as far as twenty-three miles—less than one-thousandth part of the circumference of the earth.

Down into the earth he has gone about as deep as the microbe on an apple would go if it dug its way half through the skin of the apple.

Those who don't realize what the brain of man can do smile at the suggestion that he is destined to control the planet. BUT HE WILL CONTROL IT.

The Mammoth Cave of Kentucky could probably have held all that water that bothered Dayton the other day—and a great deal more.

Holes in the ground that men will make digging out the coal and other material far below the coal will take care one day of all our spare fresh waters—provide against floods and torrents—and incidentally when men need it they will pump it out again, using the power of the tides or the power of the sun itself for the purpose, and it won't cost them a cent.

If you can't believe that THAT is true, you haven't paid much attention to the progress that men have made already.

Instead of being drowned by the water as it falls upon our earth and rushes back into the ocean, we will save it as we get it, use it as we need it, make the ocean smaller and the land wider, and look back with pity on the men of this day, victims of floods, as we now look with pity on some little insect floating around on the top of the bathtub in the morning.

That insect couldn't believe that one of its fellow animal creatures on this earth had made the bathtub with plumbing and faucets.

The small men can't believe that men will do on a big scale for the whole planet what they are able to do for the plumbing in their houses—BUT THEY WILL DO IT.

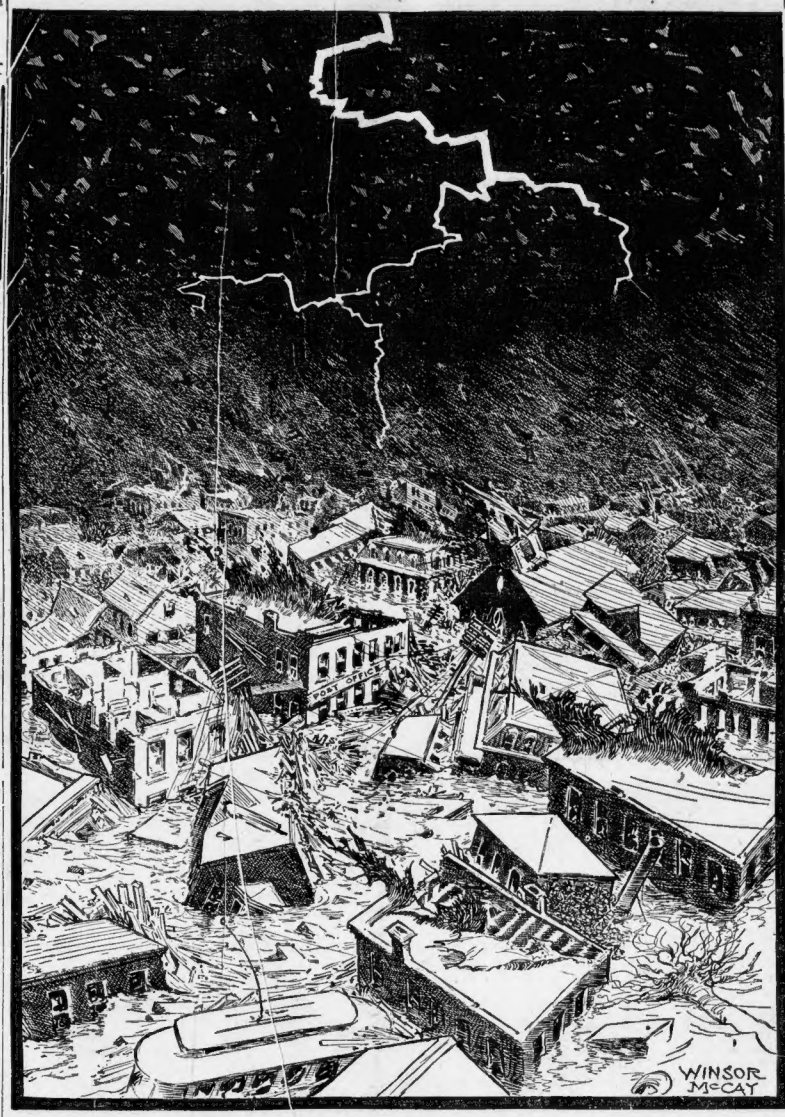
The immediate thing is that there should be some organized effort by the government, by its trained employes, especially by the army, to deal with these questions of floods, of dikes, and work along the line of prevention. If the people of the United States could make up their minds to spend their money improving the United States and employ trained bodies of men to direct the labor of hundreds of thousands or millions, we could soon manage our part of this continent, and set an example to the rest of the world.

Meanwhile, don't doubt that the day will come, and soon, when the biggest storm, the greatest tornado, or the biggest flood will be as harmless against man's power as a little ripple on a lake would be against the side of an ocean steamer.

This earth was given to man as his residence, his property and his TASK—as long as man and the earth together shall live.

It is man's job to find out how to manage his property, take care of it, develop and control it. And that he will do.

The Dreadful Power of Nature



For long periods Nature is calm, and apparently subdued. Then she bursts forth with terrific violence. Tornadoes, floods, earthquakes and fires come to tell man that he is only a feeble insect, glued for a few minutes to a great whirling planet. Such accounts of disaster as you are reading today fill human beings with terror, and a sense of hopelessness and helplessness.

BUT THEY NEED NOT BE HOPELESS. Powerful as Nature is, the intellect of man is more powerful, and will rule in the end. (SEE EDITORIAL.)

Ella Wheeler Wilcox —ON— Marriage—Despite Frequency of Divorce and Cry of Marital Unrest, Happy Unions Form Base of Our Social Structure

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Publishing Company.

IN the first glamour and rapture of possession, betrothed lovers and newly married people are immune from the influence of any third party. The most fascinating woman, the most attractive man, is powerless to awaken more than a passing platonic interest in husband or wife.

Very young lovers believe this condition will prove eternal, and when it diminishes in any degree—when either one becomes in the least susceptible to the physical or mental charms of another—they imagine they have reached a crisis of misfortune, and that wedded love is dead or dying.

Instead, they should regard it as the mere rise and fall of the emotional tides. When the sea is at high-water mark, all the pebbles and rocks on the coast are covered; when it ebbs they are revealed, but the tide comes back and covers them again.

Husband and Wife Should Realize Married Love Is Eternal Thing

The pebbles change and the rocks wear away, but the tides are eternal.

So, husband and wife should realize that married love is the eternal thing and wait for the fulness of the tides, and not regard mere incidents as tragedies, nor attach undue importance to passing distractions.

The magnet ore attracts the particle of steel until the steel is charged with the same magnetism—then it does not follow the steel.

Yet, left to itself for a period of time, it again is susceptible to the same influence. The thrill goes out of the hand-clasp and the kiss at times, because husband and wife have been so constantly associated. Let a brief separation ensue—and it is found again.

The mistake lies in supposing that it is gone forever and is rushing forth to seek a new sensation elsewhere, and if found elsewhere, to suppose it means "affinity."

Were I the mother of a young daughter about to be the wife of a man she adored, I should say to her: "Do not imagine that you will never feel the attraction of any other man when you are married. If you are in perfect health and if your mind is receptive and progressive you will, as the years pass by, find yourself interested in and stirred by other magnetic masculine personalities. When such an experience comes, give it as little thought as possible. It does not mean that you have ceased to love your husband, nor that you have found one who could hold your interest longer than he. It means that you chanced to be susceptible to an electric current which can vitalize and strengthen you if made to act upon you mentally, or can be turned into a live wire and bring destruction if you choose to make it so."

Men Not More Tempted Than Women, but Take More Privileges

To a son I should speak in precisely the same manner, perhaps oftener and with more earnestness—not because men are more tempted than women from within or without, but because they have been allowed so long to believe in their privilege to play with temptation.

It is useless to deny the fact that life offers no other fascination equal to the attraction of the sexes. It is not strange when we realize that the entire earth is formed and maintained—the vegetable as well as the animal kingdom—by this sex impulse. The only strange thing is that human beings in this advanced and scientific age consider it a subject to be avoided or a fact to be denied.

The woman who proclaims herself absolutely indifferent to men proclaims herself either hopelessly phlegmatic or anaemic. She is not normal; neither is the man who cares nothing for—and finds nothing fascinating in—the association of women.

Wise is the wife who says to herself: "My husband will see many women who charm and interest him, but he shall be so loved, entertained and trusted by me that he will not want to wander away."

Wise is the husband who says: "My wife will attract and be attracted by other men, no doubt; but she is loyal and true, and I shall give her such attention and devotion she will not wish herself the wife of any other man."

That there are many such marriages I know, for I again assert that, despite all the hue and cry raised about marital unrest, and despite the frequency of divorce, happy marriages form the base of our social structure.

Letters from American Readers

FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE DENTAL HYGIENE COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Your editorial on teeth deserves the indorsement of all who are actively interested in the present campaign for oral hygiene.

The caption, "A Clean Tooth Never Decays," expresses an important truth. It is the maxim of the hour with the great army of lecturers and writers who are waging a relentless war against the most prevalent of human diseases—dental caries.

The organ of mastication is an important element, and the only controllable element in the whole digestive system; the digestive system, in turn, being the most important of those physiological processes of the body, the proper regulation of which is necessary to the maintenance of health.

When it is considered that only about 8 per cent. of the people of this country possess healthy mouths, equipped with sound teeth, capable of the proper mastication of food, the need and value of the sermon you preach today is evident.

In bringing this important matter prominently before the six million people who come into daily contact with the Hearst papers, I believe you lend very material assistance to a cause well worthy of your support. Very respectfully yours,

EDWIN N. KENT, D. M. D.
